MAX BISHOP THRILLS CROWD WITH CATCH

39,946 See Cardinal Team Take Fourth Game for World Title.

By SHIRLEY L. POVICH
(Sports Editor of The Post).

Sportsman's Park, Oct. 5.—The only town in the big league circuit where cowbells are a part of the fans' equipment is hailing the Cardinals anew tonight, for the world series count stands now at two to two, and cheers that glutted in St. Louis throats three days ago were today unloosed in a crashing crescendo in celebration of another Cardinal victory.

By grace of the fast-ball pitching of big Jess Haines does the fourth game of the series belong to the Cardinals by a score of 3 to 1, but the 40,000 St. Louisans who blotted out every vacant spot in Sportsman's Park and cluttered the runways in a maddening crush can thank, too, Third Baseman Jimmy Dykes, whose error made possible the Cardinals' triumph and left the imprint of his first world series defeat upon the sober countenance of Lefty Grove.

The two winning runs seeped through this one opening in the Athletics brilliant defense in the fourth inning of a breath-taking pitching duel between Haines and Grove, and swerved the tide of victory to the Cardinals as decisively as if the Athletics' brilliant defense in the fourth game.

Haines and Grove in Duel.

Haines, 37-year-old veteran of the National League, who has pitched for the Cardinals in this same park for a full decade and who was a hero of the 1926 triumph over the Yankees, engaged the great Grove in a fireballing duel that permitted only nine hits throughout the afternoon, five by the Cardinals and four by the Athletics, and Grove victimized only by Dykes' lapse in the field.

They were tied at 1-1, and two Cardinals were out in the fourth with Hafey on second by virtue of his double when Ray Blades sent an easy bouncer to Dykes, which the third baseman gathered in for the apparent third out of the inning. It was not to be, however. It was only a routine toss to First Baseman Jimmy Foxx that confronted Dykes as the ball popped into his big glove, but the throw went far awry. It pulled Foxx off the bag and then he was able only to knock the ball down as Hafey scampered home before the first baseman could retrieve the pellet and rifle a throw to Cochrane at the plate.

Misplay Is Costly.

That misplay also set the stage for the Cardinals' third run of the game, for Wilson and Gelbert followed with singles that completed Blades' circuit of the bases.

With that lead of two runs the burden of winning the ball game devolved upon the Athletics hitters. How they succeeded, or rather how Haines succeeded, is illustrated emphatically by the box score.

Haines dominated the ball game after the first inning that produced the only Philadelphia run. No Gulliver ever held a Lilliputian more firmly in his grip or more completely in the hollow of his hand than did Haines hold the Athletics. With all the wiles of his 37 years, sixteen devoted to pitching, Haines faced the Athletics, and what he conceded to Grove in speed he made up in curves and strategy, for after that trying first inning he permitted only one hit, and in the last six innings not even one.

Victimized by the error of Dykes, Grove did not slacken his efforts. From the fifth inning on he permitted only one Cardinal to reach base, and that one a walk. In the third he had permitted the Cardinals to tie

Jess Haines (right), who did the unusual by outpitching the great "Lefty" Grove, holding the world's champions to but four hits to get credit for the triumph which put his team on an even basis with the Mackmen.

MRS. CREECY DEAD OF HATCHET GASHES

Wounds Husband Inflicted, Proving Fatal, Balk Mystery Solution.

RITES TO BE TOMORROW

Death perhaps forever sealed the motive of the suicidal death last Sunday of Lieut. Col. Richard Bennett Creecy, U. S. Marines, and the murder of his wife, Mrs. Louise Reifsnider Creecy, at 5 o'clock yesterday morning when Mrs. Creecy died at Emergency Hospital without regaining consciousness. She had been wounded by a hatchet in the hands of her husband.

All last week Mrs. Creecy had been lying unconscious in the hospital under the care of specialists and attending physicians. Police kept a close watch on her hoping to question her in the event that she rallied enough to talk. Friday night she stirred a little in her death-like sleep and it was thought that she was gaining strength, but she died suddenly.

When Mrs. Creecy was taken to the hospital from the hotel, where she was found lying in a pool of blood between twin beds in the Creecy suite, physicians expressed the opinion that she would not live through the day, but she lingered on, never definitely gaining, neither losing to any marked degree.

Saturday police were confident that she would be able to explain the tragedy which marked the end of what appeared to be an ideal marriage between two congenial persons.

Col. Creecy was buried with full military honors at Arlington Cemetery Wednesday, shortly after a Marine board of inquiry had declared its members believed the man had suddenly become demented and tried to kill his wife with a hand ax and then turned the gun on himself.

Mrs. Creecy was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John L. Reifsnider, of Westminster, Md. She had been married 20 years, and had lived with Col. Creecy at several military

TWO FROM CAPITAL KILLED IN CRASHES

Woman Victim in Thurmont Wreck and Bridegroom Dies in Illinois.

SEVEN PERSONS HURT

Two Washingtonians were killed in automobile accidents yesterday and seven others were injured, two seriously. Mrs. Mary Scott Mills was killed when her automobile struck a tree near Thurmont, Md., Lee Parish, attached to the Smithsonian Institution, was killed in an accident near St. Elmo, Ill., while on his way to this city with his bride of three days.

Mrs. Mills, 57 years old, of 1301 Emerson street northwest, was killed instantly and her brother and sister were seriously injured when she lost control of her automobile and it crashed head-on into a tree on the Frederick-Thurmont pike about four miles south of Thurmont.

Mrs. Margaret Hutchings, 54 years old, and John W. Scott, 39 years old, brother and sister of Mrs. Mills, were taken to the City Hospital at Frederick. They live at 1637 Webster street northwest. Mrs. Hutchings has internal injuries. Mr. Scott is suffering from fractured thigh and lacerations of the body.

Dr. James Gray, of Thurmont, who was summoned by other autoists, pronounced Mrs. Mills dead. He ordered the others taken to the hospital. A spoke from a steering wheel had pierced Mrs. Mills' head.

The accident was caused when a rear tire on the automobile blew out, causing Mrs. Mills, who was driving, to lose control of the machine. It swerved off the road and crashed into the tree. The machine was a total wreck.

Mrs. Mills was employed by the Treasury Department.

She was the widow of J. S. Mills, who was a department head in the Treasury Department. Two stepchildren, Margaret Mills, of this city, and Kenneth Fills, of Wallingford, Conn., also survive her.

The body was removed to a morgue at Thurmont. It will be brought to

RIO REMAINS CALM; ALL NEWS CENSORED

Federal Armies in Several Cities Joining Revolt, Uruguay Hears.

Montevideo, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Frontier dispatches tonight reported that the Brazilian federal government had offered to open peace negotiations with the triumphant insurgents in Rio Grande do Sul, but that the insurgent leaders had refused to accept them...

A similar offer of negotiations was said to have been made to the insurgents in the State of Minas Geraes, which lies inland from Rio de Janeiro. This offer also is said to have been rejected. Leaders of the revolution said they would accept "all responsibility for any bloodshed."

The dispatches also alleged that President Uriburu, of Argentina, had recognized Getulio Vargas, president of the State of Rio Grande do Sul, as head of a belligerent government. Vargas was presidential candidate of the Liberal party against President-elect Julio Prestes in the elections last March.

Rio De Janeiro, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—President Washington Luis today was granted $10,000,000 by congress to put down revolution in the states of Rio Grande Do Sul and Minas Geraes.

This action followed the congressional decree of yesterday which declared a state of siege in Rio Grande Do Sul, Minas Geraes and Parahyba, placing half the population of Brazil under military rule.

The government said there was no evidence of trouble outside Rio Grande Do Sul and Minas Geraes, with the great cities of Rio De Janeiro and Sao Paulo showing their normal calm activity.

The Federal capital appeared tranquil. There was very little information from outside districts. Censorship was enforced on outgoing dispatches.

Rebels Reported Mobilizing.

Montevideo, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—The insurgent leaders defying the Brazilian federal government in the State of Rio Grande do Sul tonight were reported to have mobilized all men between the ages of 21 and 35 for a northward drive upon the great southern city of Sao Pualo.

Dispatches from Rivera, on the frontier of Brazil and Uruguay, state that a revolutionary movement in

NAMING OF NEW JUDGES SOUGHT BY CONFERENCE

Five More Are Necessary, Meeting Held Here Decides.

ITS REPORT IS GIVEN PUBLIC BY HUGHES

Retention Is Also Asked of 16 Temporary Appointees.

PRESSING PROBLEM SEEN IN CONGESTION

Statement Given Out on Eve of Reconvening of U. S. Supreme Court.

(Associated Press.)

The appointment of five new District judges as a means of relieving congestion in Federal courts was recommended yesterday by senior circuit judges who met here last week to consider problems of the judiciary. In a report made public yesterday by Chief Justice Hughes, the judges also recommended that Congress make permanent the temporary creation of 16 District judgeships and one circuit judgeship which will expire under present law upon the death of the incumbents.

The report, which asserted that congestion in Federal courts was "a major problem" urged legislation to provide for an additional judge each for southern New York, eastern New York, northern Georgia, eastern Michigan and West Virginia.

The temporary judgeships were created in 1922 to handle the increased number of cases and the report said, "Experience has shown that the need was permanent."

They are located as follows: Two in Massachusetts, two in southern New York, and one each in eastern New York, western Pennsylvania, eastern Michigan, western Missouri, southern New Jersey, northern Texas, northern Ohio, eastern Missouri, southern California, Arizona, southern Iowa and Minnesota.

District Courts ehind.

The circuit judgeship is in the ninth circuit embracing California and other Western States.

Chief Justice Hughes said in the statement that the district courts were dropping behind in their work despite an increase in the number of judges and persistent efforts to bring the dockets up to date. He added the circuit courts of appeal were "reasonably abreast of their dockets."

The statement was made public on the eve of the reconvening of the Supreme Court today for a new term. During the last session it disposed of all the cases on the docket, establishing a record for recent years.

The conference found that, although the district courts were disposing of more cases than ever before,

Pilot Blames Storm For R-101 Disaster

JAMES HENRY LEECH, who was at the controls of the R-101 when it crashed and burned. The pilot's great strength enabled him to free himself from the burning death trap.

Sister of Leech Recalls He Was Pessimistic Over Flight.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Henry James Leech, one of the handful of survivors of the R-101 disaster and pilot of the dirigible at the hour of its destruction, was not very optimistic over the results o fthe trip to India, his sister, Mrs. W. A. Patrick, of Mount Washington, said here today.

KIN OF VICTIMS FLY TO WRECK OF BIG AIRSHIP

Rigger, Reported Killed, Lives, Making Eight Who Survived.

FINAL IDENTIFICATION EFFORTS TO BE TODAY

Two, Huddled Together to Await Tragedy, Pitched Clear.

WRENCH DISCOVERED IN HANDS OF CORPSE

Britons Are Restrained From Entering Ruins, Over Which Union Jack Flutters.

Beauvais, France (Monday), Oct. 6 (A.P.).—The disaster that overtook the giant British dirigible R-101 on her test flight to India and sent her hurtling to the earth in darkness Sunday morning has left her a twisted steel carcas symbolizing the tragic deaths of 46 of Britain's finest air experts and airmen.

One of her crew virtually returned to life this morning, so far as the outside world is concerned, with announcement by the Beauvais police that Rigger W. G. Radcliffe, reported dead at the Hotel Dieu (hospital), was still adive and probably could be saved.

The announcement reduced the official death list from 47 to 46 and increased the survivors to their original number, 8. The report of Radcliffe's death was ascribed by the police to a mistake at the hospital.

Seek to Identify Victims.

Of the forlorn band of survivors, Rigger S. Church is the most seriously injured. Most of his comrades, hands or faces swathed in bandages, wandered aleepless and unnerved about the town throughout the day, while in a nearby schoolhouse, 46 simple coffins of rough pine boards, contained the charred and mutilated bodies of their comrades and officers.

A final official attempt to identify the skeletons and parts of bodies found in and around the flame-devoured hulk of the R-101 will be made today. Relatives of the dead airmen and air authorities began to arrive in Beauvais during the night.

The assistance of these is the last resort of the authorities in the endeavor to make the identifications. Unmindful of the fate that overtook the dirigible in the air, several of the dead men's relatives and friends arrived by airplane from England.

"How Did It Happen?"

Four or five British airplanes came down on the rain-soaked fields scattering a crowd of spectators and curiosity seekers that had mounted to the thousands.

The question on every one's lips, though seemingly answered by the French air ministry's statement that rain and wind had caused the explosion and wreck of the dirigible, insistently remained "how did it happen?"

H. J. Leech, navigator, at the controls when the airship plowed into a partly wooded hill slope, discussed the question with M. Laurent-Eynac, French minister of air, the Associated Press correspondent acting as interpreter.

Leech explained his opinion that the R-101 had been borne down to

MAN HELD SUSPECT IN APARTMENT FIRES

Is Identified as Person Seen Shouting and Clapping Hands in Building.

DENIES STARTING BLAZE

Mysterious fires which have broken out in three large apartment houses in the northwest section a few days apart resulted in the arrest yesterday of John H. Williams, 27, colored, who is being held at the Eighth Precinct Station in connection with the fires, one of which resulted in the death of Miss Jessie Cammack, who was burned to death early Friday morning.

Williams was taken into custody yesterday after a fire had been discovered in the cellar of the Balfour Apartments. The man has been identified as the one who was seen in the corridor of the apartment shouting "Fire, Fire" and clapping his hands.

Just before the outbreak of the fire in the Balfour, police of the Eighth Precinct had been called to 1840 Ver-

LABOR FEDERATION PLANS SUBMITTED

Unemployment Emphasized in Program for Boston Convention.

HOOVER WILL SPEAK

Boston, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—A tentative program for the guidance of American labor was submitted today to delegates assembling for the fiftieth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor in the form of the annual executive council report of William Green, its president, and associated officials. Emphasis was laid on national and international unemployment. Evidence was offered, however, that the current experience was less serious than that of some previous years.

The report dealt with means for alleviation and removal of unemployment causes, and with effort to carry forward attainment of political objectives of unions; with the campaign to unionize the South, and specific details of national policy toward immigration, toward judicial action in

Athletic Players Hitting With Tears in Their Eyes

Mention Gelbert's Name to Mackmen and Get Your Ear Chewed Off; Injunction May Be Needed to End Series Now, Says Phillips.

By H. I. PHILLIPS.

(Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, Oct. 5.—A St. Louis Cardinal may be down, but he is never out. Proving that yesterday's unexpected rise from the dead was no motion picture, Gabby Street's "last minute men" ran amuck here again today.

Winning a frenzied battle, 3 to 1, before a crowd that touched new heights of hysteria, the Cards, who were two don Saturday morning, made it all even by Sabbath afternoon.

This means they will have to play the rubber here tomorrow and that the flabbergasted East will have to take at least one more look at the boys in action in Philadelphia. What gave every promise of being a short and snappy world series may now run on and on until they stop it by injunction.

These St. Louis boys make a specialty of coming from behind. It takes them a couple of days to react to abusive treatment, but when they react, they react all over.

Forty-eight hours ago the Cardinals looked so weak and futile they seemed like a case for Red Cross intercession. Tonight they look so healthy they are positively gross. It's Mr. Cornelius McGillicuddy's Boy Scouts who appear to be ambulance cases at the moment.

The Mackmen are battling with tears in their eyes.

On the scoreboards it says that the Mackmen were smacked over by the St. Louis baseball club, but the fact of the matter is that it was practically done by little Charlie Gelbert unassisted.

Gelbert was generally considered an ordinary infielder before the series.

Calvin Coolidge Says:

The annual convention of the American Legion beginning at Boston today will be a notable event. As we get farther from the war and the veterans grow older their meetings have less of the aspect of a frolic of exuberant youth and become more the serious affair of mature and thoughtful men. Consequently the Legion is more flourishing and holds a higher place in the esteem of all service men and of the public.

It is distinctly a patriotic organization. The support of American institutions is the chief object of its members. Because of them order and liberty are more secure. They are firm advocates of peace which they seek to promote through adequate preparation for national defense and the just and temperate conduct of a self-respecting people toward all the rest of the world.

Because the Legion has come into a position of great power and influence it has great responsibilities. It can set the standard for this generation in public thought and public duty. It can assume a leadership in peace scarcely less important than the service it performed in war. A grateful country looks to the Legion with increasing confidence.

500 Marines Help Battle $90,000 Blaze at Quantico

Large Quantity of Water Used From Camp Tanks, Already at Low Level From Drought; Five Buildings Are Destroyed.

Fire swept through a main building and four outbuildings with a loss of approximately $90,000 at the Marine base at Quantico, Va., yesterday afternoon, forcing into action the 500 men at the post in a stubborn battle with the spreading blaze, and reducing the drought-depleted water supply to a perilously low level.

The flames razed the large 200-foot frame structure used as headquarters of the Signal Corps, the radio school and the Signal Battalion quartermaster's storerooms, where the bulk of equipment and stores for that branch of the Marine service at the post were stored.

Gaining rapid headway after starting apparently from defective wiring, the flames suddenly surged out and enveloped an entire end of the large building, which is located about one-half mile from the center of the so-called new camp at Quantico.

A general alarm was sounded, calling into action every man at the camp, who rushed to the scene and cooperated with the fire department units under the general supervision of Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, commanding officer at the base.

Flames spread to four nearby frame structures, and these likewise were destroyed. The main loss, however, was confined to the large structure, out of which virtually nothing was salvaged.

Checking further spread of the fire, the marines were forced to use a large quantity of water from the camp tanks, the levels of which already had been reduced to a point so low that several weeks ago a general order curtailing its use was issued. The low-water situation at one time during the recent drought led to the granting of leaves of absence to many men at the camp in an effort to conserve the supply there.

Lines also were strung from the river to afford a small amount of water to fight the fire.

ground by wind and rain, but added that the big airship had failed to respond when he had attempted to gain altitude. He said all the motors were working at the time of the crash.

Pair Awaits Crash.

The slightly injured survivors also had their accounts to give, though each could tell only the little he had seen from his particular quarters. Cook, Savory, Disley, Church and Radcliffe were all confined to bed in the Beauvais Hospital, but Leach, Bell and Binks wandered about freely speaking of their terrible experience.

Bell and Binks, who were supervising the big Diesel engines in the mechanics' cabin at the time of the accident, said they felt R-101 lurch and go down. Trapped in their cabin, they huddled themselves together awaiting the crash.

It came in a few seconds that "seemed like a few centuries," Bell said. A rush of water from somewhere struck them and they were pitched clear out of the wreckage. They found themselves lying on the grass practically uninjured. Bell's hair was singed at the back of his head.

In the wreckage at noon today was found the body of a man with a monkey wrench still clasped in the bones of its right hand.

Fight to Enter Flames.

Leech, Bell and Binks succeeded in finding a flashlight in one of the rear cabins that had not yet caught fire. But the 774 feet of the big bag was fast going up in smoke and flames.

Villagers from Alonne and peasants from surrounding farms began to arrive. They had to restrain the Englishmen forcibly from attempting to fight their way into the burning airship.

Police Commissioner Charles Pestel, of Beauvais, arrived with fifteen gendarmes soon afterward. He immediately telephoned military authorities, and soon a company of the Fifty-first Infantry Regiment reached the field.

Union Jack Flutters.

But by that time the flames were blazing so fiercely the soldiers and gendarmes were helpless to render assistance or save lives. Within half an hour the entire shell of the dirigible had been destroyed and nothing remained but the stell framework.

Above the wreck a tattered Union Jack still fluttered.

The illumination from the fire roused the entire countryside and as the flames died down about 2,000 persons were pressing round them.

Not One Identified.

Soldiers and volunteers under the direction of Maj. Leon Seurin, of the Fifty-first Regiment, began as soon as possible to extricate the bodies in ten minutes five had been recovered. These five persons had just missed escaping and had been stricken down at the very edge of the blaze.

Most of the other bodies were recovered from the central cabin. The eight men who escaped were stationed in the lateral cabins and belonged to a night crew of twelve assigned to operate the airship.

Until late Sunday evening not one of the 46 charred bodies had been identified. Death by cremation had leveled all ranks, ministers, marshals, experts, officers and crew.

The disaster, the greatest the air has known since the French airship Dixmude cruised out over the Mediterranean with 52 persons aboard in December, 1923, never to return, occurred as the giant ship, the largest in the world and sister to the R-100, which visited America last July, sailed southeastward across France on its maiden voyage of any length, a trip to India and return.

Grounds and Catches Fire

Heavy wind and a rainstorm which the airship encountered shortly after it crossed the English Channel was believed to account for the disaster. Weighted by the rain, the dirigible lost buoyancy, and finally bumped into the ground once or twice south of Beauvais. Then it struck a hillside there and in ten seconds had caught fire and was a blazing inferno.

An explosion which occurred immediately after the dirigible plowed into the hillside rocked the country for miles around and brought peasants running for miles to the place of the disaster. So great was the heat from the blazing ship, however, that they could do nothing toward rescuing those aboard.

Among the R-101 dead, besides Lord Thomson and Sir Sefton Brancker, were Squadron Leader Palstra, of the Australian air force, and W. H. L. O'Neil, of the British India office. Of the 54 aboard, 12 were passengers, 5 officers, and 37 were members of the ship's crew.

Pilot Least Injured.

The dirigible left Cardington, England, for Ismalia and Karachi, India, at 7:37 p. m., British standard time (2:37 p. m., Eastern standard time) Saturday, expecting to take between five and six days to reach Karachi. It crossed the English Channel safely and was headed across France toward the Mediterranean route to the east when a hard squall blew up from the channel and put it under difficulties.

A hard, driving rain pounded the ship's sides and gathered on the fabric of its envelope, weighting it down and causing the craft to lose buoyancy. The blustery wind exerted a constant strain on the giant ship and tossed it about badly at times.

The dirigible cruised nearer and nearer the ground and finally, entering a valley south of Beauvais, there were no lifting currents to carry it above the encircling rim of hills. Probably the crew did not realize the ship was so near the ground, but suddenly the big ship bumped slightly, and then again, harder.

The roar of the explosion was heard for miles. The heavens, despite the continuous downpour of rain, were illumined by the flames, which almost immediately soared high into the sky in lurid spirals. Inhabitants of the countryside, many of whom had been awakened when the airship first passed over their heads only 400 feet or so above them, rushed to the scene, scrambling madly over pastures, fields and through the clumps of woods in their haste to arrive.

But due to the mud, the uneven terrain and the fact that the disaster occurred more than a mile from the nearest farmhouse, considerable time elapsed before any one arrived at what by that time had become a blazing mass.

Heat Repulses Rescuers

Gendarmes and some of those domiciled nearest were among the first to reach the scene of the disaster. They found their progress abruptly stayed while still far away by the unsupportable heat emitted by the flames which were steadily devouring the once great airship.

As the flames died down peasants and police began the dolorous task of extricating the blackened and maimed bodies of the victims. As the bodies were recovered they were laid in a dell beside the wreckage and later transported to the Beauvais Hospital which had been transformed into a provisional chapel adorned with British flags.

INQUIRY IS LAUNCHED INTO R-101 TRAGEDY

Experts Fly to Death Spot; Old Controversy About Dirigibles Revived.

LAST REPORTS SCANNED

London, Oct. 5 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The British air ministry today began an official investigation of the R-101 disaster. Air Chief Marshal Sir John Salmon, chief of the air staff, this morning flew from London to the scene of the accident, accompanied by Air Commodore F. V. Holt, director of technical development.

Later in the day three airplanes left Croydon carrying nine airship and technical experts to the field of death near Beauvais. They include Squadron Leader R. S. Booth, captain of the R-101; F. M. McQuade, resident inspector of the aeronautical investigation department at Cardington, home airship station of the ill-fated dirigible; R. F. Randle, chief of the design section of the royal air force works; F. S. D. Collins, chief calculator of the royal airship works; L. Bearstow, professor of aeronautics at the Imperial Collece of Science of London University; Maj. J. P. C. Cooper, inspector of accidents at the air ministry, and Maj. H. Jones, personal assistant to the late Sir Sefton Brancker, director of civil aviation, who was one of the victims of the crash.

The disaster has already revived the controversy regarding the relative merits of the lighter and heavier than air craft which had never entirely died down and which was waged long and furiously for months after the ZR-2 broke in two in the air over Hull in 1921 and crashed into the Humber, killing all but five of the passengers and crew.

Review of Policy Urged.

Capt. Rt. Hon. F. E. Guest, who is considered one of the leading authorities on aviation in this country and who was air minister in 1921 and 1922, gave a hint of what is coming when he said in an interview here this afternoon that the tragedy must reopen the 10-year old controversy as to the utility of airships.

"The morrow of such a disaster isn't a moment at which to reopen arguments which have led some of us consistently to prefer the development of heavier-than-air craft," he declared. "I hope the disaster will lead to a review of airship policy which has proved so expensive and dangerous."

Sir Denistoun Burney, designer of the R-100, which was privately built and owned, refused to commit himself this afternoon on the controversial side of the disaster.

Both Ships Criticized.

The R-100 and R-101 have been considerably criticized by various engineer architects since they were built. In 1928 E. F. Spanner, naval architect and marine engineer, published a book wherein he said that the first time either was flown at speed or caught in a severe gale while moored to a mast it would be torn to ribbons.

The R-101 was considerably modified since her first flights after her launching in October, 1929. The alterations included the insertion of a girder and a new section 45 feet long in the middle of the ship.

The increase in size drew criticism from Burney, who declared that as the size of airships was increased they became less easy to maneuver and their airworthiness was decreased. After citing the Shenandoah and other dirigible disasters, he derided the idea that any ship would be able to stand five times the shock that broke the Shenandoah in two.

No Hint in Last Messages.

The last messages received from the R-101 contained no hint of the coming tragedy. At 9:12 a. m., British summer time (daylight saving time), Croydon Airport received the following wireless from the airship:

"Thanks for valuable assistance. Will not require you further tonight."

Croydon replied at 1:23 a. m.: "Am remaining on watch."

Despite the previous message Croydon received a further signal from the airship at 2:34 a. m., asking her position, which officials at the air station worked out as one kilometer north of Beauvais. The news of the disaster reached here at 3:16 a. m. (summer time) when the following wireless message was received from Le ourget Airdrome, outside Paris: "GFAAW a pris feu" (GFAAW has taken fire). The letters represent the ship's call signal.

Hard Rain, Strong Wind.

The story of the R-101 flight up to the time her last two messages were received is told in the following "progress reports" sent out by the ship according to prearranged schedule:

"Ten thirty five p. m., crossing coast in vicinity of Hastings. It's raining hard and there is a strong southwesterly wind. After a good getaway from mooring tower at 7:07, the airship circled Bedford before setting course. Engines running well at cruising speed of 54.2 knots.

"Reached London at 9 p. m. and then set course for Paris, gradually increasing height so as to avoid high land. Ship is behaving well, generally, and we have already begun to recover water ballast.

"11:38 p. m.—Crossing French coast at Pointe de St. Quentin.

Passengers Smoke Cigars.

"Midnight—Fifteen miles south of Abbeville. Course and speed made good from time of departure, 33 knots. Wind's strength, 35 miles per hour. Altimeter height (height of airship), 1,500 feet. Air temperature, 51 degrees F. Intermittent rain, nimbus clouds, 50 feet. Conditions since departure, similar. Temperature, uniform.

"After excellent supper distinguished passengers smoked final cigar and, having sighted French coast, have now gone to bed to rest after the excitement of their leave-taking. All essential services functioning satisfactorily. Crew have settled down to watch-keeping routine.'

Referring to the fact that the ship, after telling Croydon she would not require further assistance last night, and later requested her position, an air ministry official said:

"We know that Johnson was a very careful navigator, and he was evidently following his customary policy in checking his position."

Marine Prisoner Hero Transferred for Trial

With his fate in the Marine Corps still uncertain, Private Ronald F. Guthrie, 21 years old, was transferred yesterday aboard the U. S. S. Porpoise, from the "brig" at the Washington Navy Yard to his base at Quantico, Va., to await the next move by the service in his case involving overstaying his leave from his post.

Action rested with the judge advocate general of the Navy and his commanding officer, Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, to whose attention has been brought the exploit of Guthrie on Friday, in saving a fellow marine, Corp. John J. Antinovick, from drowning when the noncommissioned officer fell into the Potomac River while guarding Guthrie.

BRAZIL VOTES $10,000,000 TO STAMP OUT REVOLUTION

sympathy with the Rio Grande leaders has broken out also in the State of Santa Cartharina, immediately north of Rio Grande do Sul. The insurgents there were marching upon the state capital, Desterro.

A railway line runs north from Rio Grande do Sul, across the states of Santa Catharina and Parana, to Sao Paulo. The insurgents in Rio Grande have mobilized locomotives and railway coaches for their soldiers.

Virtually the entire State of Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, was in revolt tonight.

Federal Army Goes Over.

Advices reaching here by way of frontier towns said that federal troops in the cities of Uruguayana, Bage, Santa Maria, Alegrete and Santa Ana have joined the revolution and it was considered assured that the entire federal army in the state, numbering 10,000, would act against the government.

The revolters have captured all national offices in the state, the reports state, and have established a censorship on all outgoing and incoming cable and telegraph matter.

Saturday the revolutionists attempted to capture all the public funds held in the national bank in Uruguayana, but employes succeeded in diverting the funds to the English Bank of London, a branch of the bank in Rivera, Uruguay.

Rivera and Artigas and Rio Branco, other Uruguayan border towns, were nearly filled with Brazilian families fleeing from the revolution and expected fighting.

The revolutionary outbreak in southern Brazil, although deeply regretted, occasioned no particular surprise in official Washington. There have been rumors for months of growing unrest, due in large measure to the weakening of Brazil's credit, which has resulted from attempts of the government to hold bumper coffee crops off the market and keep the prices up, plus general economic depression.

The eleven Brazilian government coffee warehouses are said to be full of stored coffee, much of it held as long as a year and a half in the effort to bolster prices. Meanwhile, new record crops have been harvested, and the credit situation is very close to the bottom, if not actually there.

HEART OF ENGLAND TORN BY DISASTER

Entire Nation Extends Its Sympathies to Families of R-101 Victims.

KING EXPRESSES GRIEF

London, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Shaken as by no other event in recent years, the British nation today mourned loss of its once-proud mistress of the air, the R-101, giant dirigible which Saturday night scuttled across the murky skies to a rendezvous with death.

From throne and pulpit, slums and Mayfair, lamentations and condolences went up tonight as British hearts, torn as few things have torn them since the war, extended the sympathies of the nation to survivors and families of the dead.

Until the final trials before the start for India the R-101 had not been seen in flight since before last Christmas. As late as Wednesday a trial flight of the dirigible developed a minor defect in the oil cooler, which broke down. This was declared not to be due to any structural defect, and the engines were said to have functioned perfectly.

King Expresses Sorrow.

Immediately on receipt of official news of the disaster King George sent the following telegram from Sandringham to Premier MacDonald.

"I am horrified to hear of this national disaster which has befallen the airship R-101 and the consequent serious loss of life, including that of Lord Thomson, my air minister.

"The queen and I sympathize deeply with the relatives and friends of those who have perished in the service of their country, and also with the injured survivors.

"GEORGE, R. I."

The king and queen joined with the humble village folk at the parish at Sandringham this morning in offering special prayers for those bereaved by the disaster. Queen Maude of Norway and Princess Victoria were in the congregation.

The British government received messages of condolence from rulers and the administrations of all European countries and from many overseas.

Premier Notified by Phone.

Prime Minister MacDonald, who was staying at Chequers, was notified of the disaster by telephone and immediately returned to London and proceeded to the air ministry, where he consulted with officials. The entire staff of the air ministry were on duty soon after the disaster was known.

Premier MacDonald issued the following statement:

"I heard in the early hours this morning of the terrible disaster to the R-101, and am grieved beyond words at the loss of so many splendid men whose sacrifice has been added to that glorious list of Englishmen who, on uncharted seas and unexplored lands, have gone into the unknown as pioneers and pathfinders and have met death.

"My most heartfelt sympathy goes out to their families in this hour of their bereavement. Only those who have been associated with Lord Thomson know how much the country has lost. To me no one can now fill his place of genial companionship and friendship."

Racketeer Club to Meet.

The weekly meeting of the newly organized Racketeer Club, a minor branch of the Boys' Club, will be held at the usual time next Thursday. The Boys' Club will be the scene of the session. All members are asked to be present as club participation in various form of athletic will be discussed.

FAMED AIR EXPERTS DIED IN R-101 CRASH

Lieut. Col. Richmond, Ship's Designer, Firmly Believed Dirigible Was Safe.

SIR SEFTON WAS VICTIM

London, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—In almost one minute England lost, in the R-101 disaster, which cost 47 lives early today, much of the accumulated experience of aviation construction and operation gained during the postwar years by a little group of experts—most of them dying with the R-101—who might be described as "British aviation's general staff."

For years this group had been laboring to overcome Germany's superiority in dirigibles.

But aside from the tremendous loss in air leadership, the two years spent in constructing the R-101 and the $5,000,000 poured into it have been nullified. The tragedy is considered a big setback to Great Britain's efforts in putting over a great airship construction program, for which millions of pounds have been spent and some of the greatest aviation brains in the empire assembled.

Designer Among Victims.

Prominent among the group of experts lost in the R-101 was Lieut. Col. V. C. Richmond, its designer and England's nearest approach to a Count Zeppelin.

When the R-100 and the R-101 were called "Obsolete before they are built," by some critics last year, he came to their defense in spirited fashion.

"None of the calamities predicted for the two new airships has come true," he said. "Both the R-100 and R-101 have flown their trials in some of the worst weather ever recorded for October and November."

Col. Richmond shortly thereafter sanctioned the addition of an entire new section to the R-101. This was to overcome the unexpected great weight of her engine, which had nullified much of the dirigible's lifting power.

Friend of Premier.

Col. Richmond was only 37 years old and had been in the Royal Air Service since 1915, working on the construction of nonrigid airships. He was in Germany in 1920, a member of the inter-allied commission of control, and for a short time was in charge of the airships and seaplanes surrendered by Germany.

Others of the "aviation general staff" lost on the R-101 included the air minister himself, Lord Thomson; the air vice marshal, Sir Sefton Brancker, who was director of civil aviation, and Maj. G. H. Scott, assistant director of airship development, who participated in the R-100 flight to Canada in August.

Lord Thomson was a great friend of Premier Ramsay MacDonald. He originally was a conservative in politics, but turned laborite and served as air minister in both of MacDonald's cabinets.

Knew Van Lear Black.

Sir Sefton Brancker was famous as a soldier, but devoted the latter years of his life toward bettering British aviation. Early in the war he directed British military aviation, and in the closing years was charged with all operations of the entire British air organization. He became air vice marshal in 1924.

Sir Sefton was a close friend of Van Lear Black, the late Baltimore publisher, to whom he was drawn by their mutual interest in aviation. Sir Sefton's horrible death followed closely on that of Mr. Black's, who recently fell overboard from his yacht.

Lord Thomson was 55 years old and Sir Sefton 53.

In addition to these more outstanding experts and leaders, the loss of the officers and crew of the R-101 is a severe blow to British aviation, as all were experts in their own lines and will be hard to replace.

Smoking Debated As Tragedy Cause

Official Comment Is Withheld; R-101's Fuel Oil Was Thought Safe.

London, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—One of the most keenly debated questions of all connected with the disaster to the R-101 today was whether the fact that smoking was permitted aboard could have had anything to do with the tragedy. No official comment has as yet been forthcoming, but it is known that smoking was permitted on the R-101 because she was considered the most fireproof of all dirigibles.

Chiefly conducive to this belief was the fact that fuel oil was used in the engines rather than gasoline, and was much less inflammable. Moreover, there was a completely fireproof smoking room which was isolated as far as possible from the gas bags and it is not believed that any smoking went on aboard ship save in this one apartment.

One of the last things said by Maj. G. H. Scott before going aboard the R-101 at Cardington was, "we are greatly relieved that, owing to the fact the R-101 burns crude oil, we can smoke aboard." Nevertheless the gas bags were filled with hydrogen as in other airships, and hydrogen is one of the most inflammable of gases.

PILOT LEECH BLAMES STORM FOR DISASTER TO DIRIGIBLE

land three weeks ago. She said he was enthusiastic to make the flight, but pointed out the ship and undertaking were new.

Beauvais, France, Oct. 5 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—With her bent and fire-tortured frame stretching from far down a beet field, across a hedge and into a pasture on top of a hill a mile from the Village of Allonne, the wreck of the world's mightiest dirigible, the R-101, lies tonight with fire still smoldering under her twisted skeleton.

What caused the giant airliner to plow her nose into the muddy side of a wooded hill, where she instantly became a blazing inferno as her 25 tons of fuel were ignited by a terrific explosion, also remains to be determined by investigation. It seems certain that the R-101 lacked the buoyancy necessary to lift her over the rims of the hills encircling the valley into which she flew.

The British air ministry's official investigation of the tragedy came today with the arrival here of Air Chief Marshal Sir John Salmon, chief of the air staff, who flew here from London accompanied by Air Commodore F. V. Holt, director of technical development. Nine more airship and technical experts later joined them here, also flying from Croydon.

Sir William Tyrrell, British Ambassador at Paris, and Laurent-Eynac, French air minister, are also here.

H. J. Leech, foreman and engineer of the Royal Airship orks, was in the control cabin when the crash occurred.

"We got into a terrific storm with high winds, and the dirigible simply would not rise. I gave her more gas to get her up in the air, but she did not respond," he said.

"Rain was falling in such torrents that our ship was blown down to earth. She bumped twice slightly and then a terrific impact buried her nose into the ground. Immediately came a terrific explosion, followed by two lesser ones.

"Flames instantly engulfed the airship. I was shot outside my pilot window and found myself on the ground. At the moment of the catastrophe everybody aboard except myself and assitsant navigators were asleep. The motors were turning to perfection. It was the tempest which caused our destruction."

Two of the most important statements are those by J. H. Binks, engineer on duty in the after power station at the time of the catastrophe, and by Mr. Leach, quoted above.

Mr. Binks and Engineer A. V. Bell, whom he was relieving, were miraculously saved by a water tank bursting over their heads and cutting a waterway to safety for them through a wall of fire.

Mr. Leech further owes his life to his own Herculean strength which enabled him to bend girders which pinned him to earth and then scramble under others to escape the flames. Mr. Binks, whose only injury was the singing of his back hair, said tonight:

"I had just come down into the after power station to relieve Bell when he told me we were making heavy weather through thick rain and a high wind. As he was speaking we both noticed that the ship went over at a surprising angle but quickly righted herself again.

"We were making 65 knots at this moment when an order came through to slow down the engines. Immediately afterward the nose dipped and we got a second order to shut off the engines.

"We had hardly done so when we struck something. We could hardly believe it was the ground as we had no idea we were so near earth. But there was no time to think of that, as the forward engines exploded as we crashed to earth and waves of flame came rushing aft.

"At the same time water began pouring into the cabin. We thought at first the airship was in water but a second later we saw it was coming from the tank overhead which had broken and was flooding down on us.

"We crouched in the cabin away from the heat and flames. Then, seeing the water cutting a way for us right through the body of the ship, we dropped down and found that our part of the ship was some feet above the ground. So all we had to do was roll over and over in the wet grass with wet handkerchiefs over our faces to get away from the flames.

"Bell and I thought at first of helping to save others, but we saw in a flash that there was no chance for those forward, as the ship, by this time was a mass of solid flame in which they were imprisoned."

Mr. Binks and Mr. Bell together tried to visualize what had happened, but only knew from what they heard afterward that the ship had been manoeuvering strangely as it passed over Beauvais. They thought it was only being buffeted by a heavy wind but advanced the surmise that it might have dived into a wind pocket and, being at a height of only 800 feet, hit the top of the hill which is at an elevation of 700 feet.

Mr. Leech said:

"The dirigible had been going normally after the start from Cardington. It was weighed down by rain and it was difficult to make altitude, but ther seemed no cause for alarm. It was only when we were over Beauvais that I noticed the ship seemed to be acquiring a plunging motion. That may have been due to a break in the tail, but that is not sure and nothing of the kind occurred to me at the time. The tail may have been broken after the crash.

"I was thrown to the floor of the cabin by the shock of the explosion and pinned down by a bent girder, but I heaved it off and tore the outside of the cabin and got my head through before I was suffocated. Then I pulled my body through the hole, threw myself to the ground and rotlled away from the flaming envelope."

Assistant Wireless Operator Disley, who is among the survivors now in the hospital here, was not as strong as Leech. Trapped in his cabin he could not tear his way to safety through the fabric. After frantic efforts he finally fell exhausted to the floor of the cabin only to find that a hole had been burned through it. Through this hole he rolled out onto the wet beet field.

Volunteers Check Raging Forest Fire

Prisoners From Maryland Correction House Aid in Battle.

A raging forest fire, with smoke and flame visible for miles, in the vicinity of Laurel, Md., last night was reported under control and nearly 100 volunteer fire fighters sought rest after fighting the flames all day.

Prisoners from the Maryland House of Correction at Jessups Cut were sent under guard to halt the progress of the fire when it menaced a number of farm houses in the vicinity.

State police from the Laurel substation aided in spreading the alarm and organizing fire fighting brigades. The flames are reported to have swept the Langford farm, in the vicinity of the penal institution.

Entire Town Where R-101 Crew Lived Is in Mourning

Only Younger Children Play in Streets, Not Knowing Fathers Perished in Flaming Wreck; Merry Farewell Party Was Held Saturday.

London, Oct. 5 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The whole of the little village of Shortstown, which has grown up outside the gates of Cardington Airship Station, is in mourning today. Nearly all of the crew of the R-101 lived there, and most of them were married men who have left wives and children.

Squadron Leader E. L. Johnson, navigator of the ship, lived in an old farmhouse adjoining the airship station, with his wife and child. Wing Commander R. B. B. Colmore, director of airship development in the air ministry, who lived not far away, was the central figure of a merry farewell party at Bedford Hotel Saturday, when his wife and 13-year-old daughter said good-by to him.

On that occasion Colmore and his brother officers were presented by the landlord of the hotel with a nine-gallon cask of beer, entwined with the Union Jack and the Indian flag, which they took aboard the dirigible to drink on the voyage.

Many of the younger children played in the streets of Shortstown today. They have not been told that their fathers perished in the flaming wreck of the R-101.

There is a story told at Shortstown today of a night watchman at the Cardington Airdrome who saw the catastrophe in a dream. Dozing, he thought he saw the airship driven nose downward toward the earth until she crashed. He awakened in a cold sweat about 2 a. m. and telephoned the control tower, which told him that since the last o. k. message at midnight no news had been received from the ship.

RED SCARE TIGHTENS MILL PICKET LINES

Danville Watchers Grow in Number as Owners Exercise Vigilance.

SUSPECT IS HELD IN JAIL

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Oct. 5.—The claim today that the police had unearthed evidence of a plot by Communists to complicate the local textile strike by damaging physical property of the Dan River Mills resulted today in the strikers' picket lines being increased and in greater vigilance on the part of the mill management in protecting its plants. While Marvin Mahan denied any affiliation with the Communist party, stating that he was simply a railway man out of work, who had drifted here during the strike period, he was still being held in jail on a warrant charging him with inciting to violence because of alleged remarks made by him offering to provide dynamite to the strikers.

W. R. Murdock, of New Bedford, Mass., charged with distributing incendiary literature, also remained in jail, but was permitted to call a New York attorney and ask that the National Textile Workers Union send counsel here to represent him.

Officials of the union, members of which are on strike, seized upon the Communist development today to issue a statement through Paul Aymon, organizer, in which he asserted: "The mill management is playing into the hands of their foreign crew by refusing to deal directly with their fellow citizens." The charge also was made that as late as last June the mill management employed Dewey Martin, a member of the American Textile Workers Union, and that he was permitted to go to and from New York, where he was in contact with the Communist leaders.

Another inspiration meeting for strikers was held in the city park this evening, with union men from High Point, N. C., and other local officials bidding the strikers to maintain their present unity. They predicted that the strike would be won by this means.

The mill management has issued no eviction orders so far and it is reported that the few men admitted to the mills each day are "bedding down" the plants for a long period of idleness.

Police announced today that in searching Murdock's hotel room they had obtained a notebook with a number of local names and addresses in the mill section. When arrested and pressed for the names of members of the organiaztion in Danville, Murdock declined to reveal them.

Girl Helped Prisoner To Escape, Is Charge

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 5.—Mary Crummitt, 17, is being held for juvenile court action charged with aiding Harry Sibert escape from the Shenandoah County Jail at Woodstock early this week. She is said to have come to Middletown, near here, and obtained six saws from Sibert's automobile, and to have delivered them to him in the jail at Woodstock. Sibert, serving a year's sentence for a liquor law violation, had the saws in his shoes when recaptured.

Clyde Rosenberger, serving five years for burglary, was caught and Dayton Shiffiet, accused of automobile theft, was shot twice by Sheriff Sheetz while trying to escape with Sibert.

Reduction in Tax Rate Discussed in Bedford

Special to The Washington Post.

Bedford, Va., Oct. 5.—The adoption of the budget with a reduction of 15 cents in the tax rate was the principal matter considered at an adjourned meeting of the town council held Friday night with Mayor J. W. Gillespie, presiding. The former rate was $1.75 on the $100, and the reduction brings it down to $1.60.

Plans for the year were discussed, and it was directed that all business firms having signs overhanging the street be notified to remove them. There is an ordinance prohibiting such signs, but it appears that it has not been enforced entirely. Electric signs which hang over the street must be approved by the light superintendent.

Self-Inflicted Wound Fatal to Blacksmith

Special to The Washington Post.

Frostburg, Md., Oct. 5.—John Moore, 58, died early today at Miners Hospital, from a gash in the throat, self-inflicted, while despondent over illness. He was found in a pool of blood in his bedroom by his sister, Mrs. Dennis Boyle, with whom he made his home. He used a razor, according to the authorities, and missed the jugular vein about an eighth of an inch.

Moore had been a blacksmith at the Eckhart Mines of the Consolidation Coal Co. for 40 years. In recent years he conducted his shop, one of the few remaining in this territory. He is survived by one other sister, Mrs. Della Crawford, Philadelphia, and two brothers, James, Baltimore, and Daniel, Cumberland.

Fire Destroys Home With Loss of $15,000

Culpeper, Va., Oct. 5.—The handsome home of A. J. Wood, at Brandy, 7 miles north of here, was completely destroyed by fire believed to have started from a defective flue.

Three school teachers who boarded at the Wood home lost part of their belongings in the fire. Carter R. Hall, who rented an apartment, and Edgar Freeman, father of Mrs. Wood, both invalids, were taken out. Mark Pulliam, a nephew of Mrs. Wood, lost all of his clothing and a large amount of old jewelry, which had belonged to his mother and grandmother. The total loss was estimated to be about $15,000 with insurance of $11,000.

G. O. P. VERY ACTIVE IN GARBER'S BEHALF

Party Is Trying to Overcome Handicap of Absence of Name on Ballot.

DEMOCRATS ARE SURE

Special to The Washington Post.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 5.—Seventh District Republicans are leaving nothing undone to keep Representative J. A. Garber in Congress, it was revealed here yesterday, the last day for the registration of voters, and are very unwilling to concede his defeat to Judge John W. Fishburne, Democrat, in the November election.

Democratic leaders who have felt that it is all over in the Seventh but counting the votes, admitted today that the Republicans showed unusual activity in lining up voters, even more than was shown during the Hoover landslide of 1928. Democrats do not seem to have taken as much interest in the registration as the Republicans.

Garber's supporters feel they will be able to overcome the absence of his name from the official ballot by increased registration of voters. Garber failed to file notice of his candidacy in time with the secretary of the Commonwealth and his name will have to be rubber-stamped on the ballot. Reports from the meeting of the Democratic central committee at Richmond last Wednesday were to the effect that party leaders regarded Garber out of the race because of his failure to file.

President Hoover carried the Seventh District in 1928 by 4,000 votes, while Garber was elected by only a few hundred. As the district normally is Democratic, neutral voters are wondering whether the increased activity by the Republicans means that Judge Fishburne faces a real fight to be elected, or whether the G. O. P. is determined to hold Rockingham, Shenandoah and Page Counties in line for the county elections next year.

Garber was county treasurer of Rockingham before he was elected to Congress. There is much talk that he will seek his only county post should he not be reelected to Congress. This is one explanation for the increased activity by the Republicans in behalf of Garber now. County treasurers in Virginia are important factors in qualifying voters, because they keep a check on the payment of poll tax prerequisite for voting.

The Democratic leaders, meeting with the Democratic State central committee at Richmond, decided to concentrate their fight in the Second and Ninth districts, now held by Republicans. Not only in these districts will the Democrats devote their campaign funds but they will center their "big-gun" speakers. Senator Claude A. Swanson told the Democratic leaders that this is a Democratic year and the prospects are bright for a clean sweep in Virginia for Congress.

BERLIN IS BLESSED WITH 5,000 VEREINS

All Officially Registered With Many More of Less Formal Nature.

GERMAN GREAT JOINER

Berlin, Oct. 4 (A.P.).—The old witticism that when two Germans meet they organize a "verein" would seem based on fact in the case of the German capital, which is blessed with no less than 5,000 "vereinie" registered with the authorities, not to speak of thousands of others which are of a less formal nature.

Of these 5,000, the largest single group is that of clubs and associations devoted to athletics. There are more than 1,000 such "vereine" registered.

Another large group is pledged to health and uplift of the youth. Some 270 organizations are devoting their energies to the latter.

Pupils in the schools of Berlin are organized in 80 "vereine," parents in only 18. There are 270 college students' organizations. Lovers of the theater are banded together in 70 "theatervereine," and those who wish local history and traditions to be preserved, in 50 registered organizations.

An enumeration of German societies would be unthinkable without singing societies. Berlin boasts of 47 large male, mixed and ladies' choruses, not including countless church choirs which are not registered as such. To these must further be added 45 musical societies.

Radio fans, postage stamp collectors, amateur photographers, huntsmen, chess players—even the wearers of long beards—all are organized, as are also Berliners interested in chemistry, politics, religion, history, medicine, natural sciences, law, languages, astrology, occultism and bibliography.

Membership in a "verein" from cradle to grave appears to be the motto, for in addition to the many welfare organizations taking care of babes there are fourteen burial societies, which see that even mourning is organized properly.

the ground by wind and rain, but added that the big airship had failed to respond when he had attempted to gain altitude. He said all the motors were working at the time of the crash.

Pair Awaits Crash.

The slightly injured survivors also had their accounts to give, though each could tell only the little he had seen from his particular quarters. Cook, Savory, Disley, Church and Radcliffe were all confined to bed in the Beauvais Hospital, but Leach, Bell and Binks wandered about freely speaking of their terrible experience.

Bell and Binks, who were supervising the big Diesel engines in the mechanics' cabin at the time of the accident, said they felt R-101 lurch and go down. Trapped in their cabin, they huddled themselves together awaiting the crash.

It came in a few seconds that "seemed like a few centuries," Bell said. A rush of water from somewhere struck them and they were pitched clear out of the wreckage. They found themselves lying on the grass practically uninjured. Bell's hair was singed at the back of his head.

In the wreckage at noon today was found the body of a man with a monkey wrench still clasped in the bones of its right hand.

Fight to Enter Flames.

Leech, Bell and Binks succeeded in finding a flashlight in one of the rear cabins that had not yet caught fire. But the 774 feet of the big bag was fast going up in smoke and flames.

Villagers from Alonne and peasants from surrounding farms began to arrive. They had to restrain the Englishmen forcibly from attempting to fight their way into the burning airship.

Police Commissioner Charles Pestel, of Beauvais, arrived with fifteen gendarmes soon afterward. He immediately telephoned military authorities, and soon a company of the Fifty-first Infantry Regiment reached the field.

Union Jack Flutters.

But by that time the flames were blazing so fiercely the soldiers and gendarmes were helpless to render assistance or save lives. Within half an hour the entire shell of the dirigible had been destroyed and nothing remained but the stell framework.

Above the wreck a tattered Union Jack still fluttered.

The illumination from the fire roused the entire countryside and as the flames died down about 2,000 persons were pressing round them.

Not One Identified.

Soldiers and volunteers under the direction of Maj. Leon Seurin, of the Fifty-first Regiment, began as soon as possible to extricate the bodies in ten minutes five had been recovered. These five persons had just missed escaping and had been stricken down at the very edge of the blaze.

Most of the other bodies were recovered from the central cabin. The eight men who escaped were stationed in the lateral cabins and belonged to a night crew of twelve assigned to operate the airship.

Until late Sunday evening not one of the 46 charred bodies had been identified. Death by cremation had leveled all ranks, ministers, marshals, experts, officers and crew.

The disaster, the greatest the air has known since the French airship Dixmude cruised out over the Mediterranean with 52 persons aboard in December, 1923, never to return, occurred as the giant ship, the largest in the world and sister to the R-100, which visited America last July, sailed southeastward across France on its maiden voyage of any length, a trip to India and return.

Grounds and Catches Fire

Heavy wind and a rainstorm which the airship encountered shortly after it crossed the English Channel was believed to account for the disaster. Weighted by the rain, the dirigible lost buoyancy, and finally bumped into the ground once or twice south of Beauvais. Then it struck a hillside there and in ten seconds had caught fire and was a blazing inferno.

An explosion which occurred immediately after the dirigible plowed into the hillside rocked the country for miles around and brought peasants running for miles to the place of the disaster. So great was the heat from the blazing ship, however, that they could do nothing toward rescuing those aboard.

Among the R-101 dead, besides Lord Thomson and Sir Sefton Brancker, were Squadron Leader Palstra, of the Australian air force, and W. H. L. O'Neil, of the British India office. Of the 54 aboard, 12 were passengers, 5 officers, and 37 were members of the ship's crew.

Pilot Least Injured.

The dirigible left Cardington, England, for Ismalia and Karachi, India, at 7:37 p. m., British standard time (2:37 p. m., Eastern standard time) Saturday, expecting to take between five and six days to reach Karachi. It crossed the English Channel safely and was headed across France toward the Mediterranean route to the east when a hard squall blew up from the channel and put it under difficulties.

A hard, driving rain pounded the ship's sides and gathered on the fabric of its envelope, weighting it down and causing the craft to lose buoyancy. The blustery wind exerted a constant strain on the giant ship and tossed it about badly at times.

The dirigible cruised nearer and nearer the ground and finally, entering a valley south of Beauvais, there were no lifting currents to carry it above the encircling rim of hills. Probably the crew did not realize the ship was so near the ground, but suddenly the big ship bumped slightly, and then again, harder.

The roar of the explosion was heard for miles. The heavens, despite the continuous downpour of rain, were illumined by the flames, which almost immediately soared high into the sky in lurid spirals. Inhabitants of the countryside, many of whom had been awakened when the airship first passed over their heads only 400 feet or so above them, rushed to the scene, scrambling madly over pastures, fields and through the clumps of woods in their haste to arrive.

But due to the mud, the uneven terrain and the fact that the disaster occurred more than a mile from the nearest farmhouse, considerable time elapsed before any one arrived at what by that time had become a blazing mass.

Heat Repulses Rescuers

Gendarmes and some of those domiciled nearest were among the first to reach the scene of the disaster. They found their progress abruptly stayed while still far away by the unsupportable heat emitted by the flames which were steadily devouring the once great airship.

As the flames died down peasants and police began the dolorous task of extricating the blackened and maimed bodies of the victims. As the bodies were recovered they were laid in a dell beside the wreckage and later transported to the Beauvais Hospital which had been transformed into a provisional chapel adorned with British flags.

INQUIRY IS LAUNCHED INTO R-101 TRAGEDY

Experts Fly to Death Spot; Old Controversy About Dirigibles Revived.

LAST REPORTS SCANNED

London, Oct. 5 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The British air ministry today began an official investigation of the R-101 disaster. Air Chief Marshal Sir John Salmon, chief of the air staff, this morning flew from London to the scene of the accident, accompanied by Air Commodore F. V. Holt, director of technical development.

Later in the day three airplanes left Croydon carrying nine airship and technical experts to the field of death near Beauvais. They include Squadron Leader R. S. Booth, captain of the R-101; F. M. McQuade, resident inspector of the aeronautical investigation department at Cardington, home airship station of the ill-fated dirigible; R. F. Randle, chief of the design section of the royal air force works; F. S. D. Collins, chief calculator of the royal airship works; L. Bearstow, professor of aeronautics at the Imperial Collece of Science of London University; Maj. J. P. C. Cooper, inspector of accidents at the air ministry, and Maj. H. Jones, personal assistant to the late Sir Sefton Brancker, director of civil aviation, who was one of the victims of the crash.

The disaster has already revived the controversy regarding the relative merits of the lighter and heavier than air craft which had never entirely died down and which was waged long and furiously for months after the ZR-2 broke in two in the air over Hull in 1921 and crashed into the Humber, killing all but five of the passengers and crew.

Review of Policy Urged.

Capt. Rt. Hon. F. E. Guest, who is considered one of the leading authorities on aviation in this country and who was air minister in 1921 and 1922, gave a hint of what is coming when he said in an interview here this afternoon that the tragedy must reopen the 10-year old controversy as to the utility of airships.

"The morrow of such a disaster isn't a moment at which to reopen arguments which have led some of us consistently to prefer the development of heavier-than-air craft," he declared. "I hope the disaster will lead to a review of airship policy which has proved so expensive and dangerous."

Sir Denistoun Burney, designer of the R-100, which was privately built and owned, refused to commit himself this afternoon on the controversial side of the disaster.

Both Ships Criticized.

The R-100 and R-101 have been considerably criticized by various engineer architects since they were built. In 1928 E. F. Spanner, naval architect and marine engineer, published a book wherein he said that the first time either was flown at speed or caught in a severe gale while moored to a mast it would be torn to ribbons.

The R-101 was considerably modified since her first flights after her launching in October, 1929. The alterations included the insertion of a girder and a new section 45 feet long in the middle of the ship.

The increase in size drew criticism from Burney, who declared that as the size of airships was increased they became less easy to maneuver and their airworthiness was decreased. After citing the Shenandoah and other dirigible disasters, he derided the idea that any ship would be able to stand five times the shock that broke the Shenandoah in two.

No Hint in Last Messages.

The last messages received from the R-101 contained no hint of the coming tragedy. At 5:12 a. m., British summer time (daylight saving time), Croydon Airport received the following wireless from the airship:

"Thanks for valuable assistance. Will not require you further tonight."

Croydon replied at 1:23 a. m.: "Am remaining on watch."

Despite the previous message Croydon received a further signal from the airship at 2:34 a. m., asking her position, which officials at the air station worked out as one kilometer north of Beauvais. The news of the disaster reached here at 3:16 a. m. (summer time) when the following wireless message was received from Le ourget Airdrome, outside Paris: "GFAAW a pris feu" (GFAAW has taken fire). The letters represent the ship's call signal.

Hard Rain, Strong Wind.

The story of the R-101 flight up to the time her last two messages were received is told in the following "progress reports" sent out by the ship according to prearranged schedule:

"Ten thirty five p. m., crossing coast in vicinity of Hastings. It's raining hard and there is a strong southwesterly wind. After a good getaway from mooring tower at 7:07, the airship circled Bedford before setting course. Engines running well at cruising speed of 54.2 knots.

"Reached London at 9 p. m. and then set course for Paris, gradually increasing height so as to avoid high land. Ship is behaving well, generally, and we have already begun to recover water ballast.

"11:38 p. m.—Crossing French coast at Pointe de St. Quentin.

Passengers Smoke Cigars.

"Midnight—Fifteen miles south of Abbeville. Course and speed made good from time of departure, 33 knots. Wind's strength, 35 miles per hour. Altimeter height (height of airship), 1,500 feet. Air temperature, 51 degrees F. Intermittent rain, nimbus clouds, 50 feet. Conditions since departure, similar. Temperature, uniform.

"After excellent supper distinguished passengers smoked final cigar and, having sighted French coast, have now gone to bed to rest after the excitement of their leave-taking. All essential services functioning satisfactorily. Crew have settled down to watch-keeping routine.'

Referring to the fact that the ship, after telling Croydon she would not require further assistance last night, and later requested her position, an air ministry official said:

"We know that Johnson was a very careful navigator, and he was evidently following his customary policy in checking his position."

Marine Prisoner Hero Transferred for Trial

With his fate in the Marine Corps still uncertain, Private Ronald F. Guthrie, 21 years old, was transferred yesterday aboard the U. S. S. Porpoise, from the "brig" at the Washington Navy Yard to his base at Quantico, Va., to await the next move by the service in his case involving overstaying his leave from his post.

Action rested with the judge advocate general of the Navy and his commanding officer, Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, to whose attention has been brought the exploit of Guthrie on Friday, in saving a fellow marine. Corp. John J. Antinovick, from drowning when the noncommissioned officer fell into the Potomac River while guarding Guthrie.

BRAZIL VOTES $10,000,000 TO STAMP OUT REVOLUTION

sympathy with the Rio Grande leaders has broken out also in the State of Santa Cartharina, immediately north of Rio Grande do Sul. The insurgents there were marching upon the state capital, Desterro.

A railway line runs north from Rio Grande do Sul, across the states of Santa Catharina and Parana, to Sao Paulo. The insurgents in Rio Grande have mobilized locomotives and railway coaches for their soldiers.

Virtually the entire State of Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, was in revolt tonight.

Federal Army Goes Over.

Advices reaching here by way of frontier towns said that federal troops in the cities of Uruguayana, Bage, Santa Maria, Alegrete and Santa Ana have joined the revolution and it was considered assured that the entire federal army in the state, numbering 10,000, would act against the government.

The revolters have captured all national offices in the state, the reports state, and have established a censorship on all outgoing and incoming cable and telegraph matter.

Saturday the revolutionists attempted to capture all the public funds held in the national bank in Uruguayana, but employes succeeded in diverting the funds to the English Bank of London, a branch of the bank in Rivera, Uruguay.

Rivera and Artigas and Rio Branco, other Uruguayan border towns, were nearly filled with Brazilian families fleeing from the revolution and expected fighting.

The revolutionary outbreak in southern Brazil, although deeply regretted, occasioned no particular surprise in official Washington. There have been rumors for months of growing unrest, due in large measure to the weakening of Brazil's credit, which has resulted from attempts of the government to hold bumper coffee crops off the market and keep the prices up, plus general economic depression.

The eleven Brazilian government coffee warehouses are said to be full of stored coffee, much of it held as long as a year and a half in the effort to bolster prices. Meanwhile, new record crops have been harvested, and the credit situation is very close to the bottom, if not actually there.

HEART OF ENGLAND TORN BY DISASTER

Entire Nation Extends Its Sympathies to Families of R-101 Victims.

KING EXPRESSES GRIEF

London, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Shaken as by no other event in recent years, the British nation today mourned loss of its once-proud mistress of the air, the R-101, giant dirigible which Saturday night scuttled across the murky skies to a rendezvous with death.

From throne and pulpit, slums and Mayfair, lamentations and condolences went up tonight as British hearts, torn as few things have torn them since the war, extended the sympathies of the nation to survivors and families of the dead.

Until the final trials before the start for India the R-101 had not been seen in flight since before last Christmas. As late as Wednesday a trial flight of the dirigible developed a minor defect in the oil cooler, which broke down. This was declared not to be due to any structural defect, and the engines were said to have functioned perfectly.

King Expresses Sorrow.

Immediately on receipt of official news of the disaster King George sent the following telegram from Sandringham to Premier MacDonald.

"I am horrified to hear of this national disaster which has befallen the airship R-101 and the consequent serious loss of life, including that of Lord Thomson, my air minister.

"The queen and I sympathize deeply with the relatives and friends of those who have perished in the service of their country, and also with the injured survivors.

"GEORGE, R. I."

The king and queen joined with the humble village folk at the parish at Sandringham this morning in offering special prayers for those bereaved by the disaster. Queen Maude of Norway and Princess Victoria were in the congregation.

The British government received messages of condolence from rulers and the administrations of all European countries and from many overseas.

Premier Notified by Phone.

Prime Minister MacDonald, who was staying at Chequers, was notified of the disaster by telephone and immediately returned to London and proceeded to the air ministry, where he consulted with officials. The entire staff of the air ministry were on duty soon after the disaster was known.

Premier MacDonald issued the following statement:

"I heard in the early hours this morning of the terrible disaster to the R-101, and am grieved beyond words at the loss of so many splendid men whose sacrifice has been added to that glorious list of Englishmen who, on uncharted seas and unexplored lands, have gone into the unknown as pioneers and pathfinders and have met death.

"My most heartfelt sympathy goes out to their families in this hour of their bereavement. Only those who have been associated with Lord Thomson know how much the country has lost. To me no one can now fill his place of genial companionship and friendship."

Racketeer Club to Meet.

The weekly meeting of the newly organized Racketeer Club, a minor branch of the Boys' Club, will be held at the usual time next Thursday. The Boys' Club will be the scene of the session. All members are asked to be present as club participation in various form of athletic will be discussed.

FAMED AIR EXPERTS DIED IN R-101 CRASH

Lieut. Col. Richmond, Ship's Designer, Firmly Believed Dirigible Was Safe.

SIR SEFTON WAS VICTIM

London, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—In almost one minute England lost, in the R-101 disaster, which cost 47 lives early today, much of the accumulated experience of aviation construction and operation gained during the postwar years by a little group of experts—most of them dying with the R-101—who might be described as "British aviation's general staff."

For years this group had been laboring to overcome Germany's superiority in dirigibles.

But aside from the tremendous loss in air leadership, the two years spent in constructing the R-101 and the $5,000,000 poured into it have been nullified. The tragedy is considered a big setback to Great Britain's efforts in putting over a great airship construction program, for which millions of pounds have been spent and some of the greatest aviation brains in the empire assembled.

Designer Among Victims.

Prominent among the group of experts lost in the R-101 was Lieut. Col. V. C. Richmond, its designer and England's nearest approach to a Count Zeppelin.

When the R-100 and the R-101 were called "Obsolete before they are built," by some critics last year, he came to their defense in spirited fashion.

"None of the calamities predicted for the two new airships has come true," he said. "Both the R-100 and R-101 have flown their trials in some of the worst weather ever recorded for October and November."

Col. Richmond shortly thereafter sanctioned the addition of an entire new section to the R-101. This was to overcome the unexpected great weight of her engine, which had nullified much of the dirigible's lifting power.

Friend of Premier.

Col. Richmond was only 37 years old and had been in the Royal Air Service since 1915, working on the construction of nonrigid airships. He was in Germany in 1920, a member of the inter-allied commission of control, and for a short time was in charge of the airships and seaplanes surrendered by Germany.

Others of the "aviation general staff" lost on the R-101 included the air minister himself, Lord Thomson; the air vice marshal, Sir Sefton Brancker, who was director of civil aviation, and Maj. G. H. Scott, assistant director of airship development, who participated in the R-100 flight to Canada in August.

Lord Thomson was a great friend of Premier Ramsay MacDonald. He originally was a conservative in politics, but turned laborite and served as air minister in both of MacDonald's cabinets.

Knew Van Lear Black.

Sir Sefton Brancker was famous as a soldier, but devoted the latter years of his life toward bettering British aviation. Early in the war he directed British military aviation, and in the closing years was charged with all operations of the entire British air organization. He became air vice marshal in 1924.

Sir Sefton was a close friend of Van Lear Black, the late Baltimore publisher, to whom he was drawn by their mutual interest in aviation. Sir Sefton's horrible death followed closely on that of Mr. Black's, who recently fell overboard from his yacht.

Lord Thomson was 55 years old and Sir Sefton 53.

In addition to these more outstanding experts and leaders, the loss of the officers and crew of the R-101 is a severe blow to British aviation, as all were experts in their own lines and will be hard to replace.

Smoking Debated As Tragedy Cause

Official Comment Is Withheld; R-101's Fuel Oil Was Thought Safe.

London, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—One of the most keenly debated questions of all connected with the disaster to the R-101 today was whether the fact that smoking was permitted aboard could have had anything to do with the tragedy. No official comment has as yet been forthcoming, but it is known that smoking was permitted on the R-101 because she was considered the most fireproof of all dirigibles.

Chiefly conducive to this belief was the fact that fuel oil was used in the engines rather than gasoline, and was much less inflammable. Moreover, there was a completely fireproof smoking room which was isolated as far as possible from the gas bags and it is not believed that any smoking went on aboard ship save in this one apartment.

One of the last things said by Maj. G. H. Scott before going aboard the R-101 at Cardington was, "we are greatly relieved that, owing to the fact the R-101 burns crude oil, we can smoke aboard." Nevertheless the gas bags were filled with hydrogen as in other airships, and hydrogen is one of the most inflammable of gases.

land three weeks ago. She said he was enthusiastic to make the flight, but pointed out the ship and undertaking were new.

Beauvais, France, Oct. 5 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—With her bent and fire-tortured frame stretching from far down a beet field, across a hedge and into a pasture on top of a hill a mile from the Village of Allonne, the wreck of the world's mightiest dirigible, the R-101, lies tonight with fire still smoldering under her twisted skeleton.

What caused the giant airliner to plow her nose into the muddy side of a wooded hill, where she instantly became a blazing inferno as her 25 tons of fuel were ignited by a terrific explosion, also remains to be determined by investigation. It seems certain that the R-101 lacked the buoyancy necessary to lift her over the rims of the hills encircling the valley into which she flew.

The British air ministry's official investigation of the tragedy came today with the arrival here of Air Chief Marshal Sir John Salmon, chief of the air staff, who flew here from London accompanied by Air Commodore F. V. Holt, director of technical development. Nine more airship and technical experts later joined them here, also flying from Croydon.

Sir William Tyrrell, British Ambassador at Paris, and Laurent-Eynac, French air minister, are also here.

H. J. Leech, foreman and engineer of the Royal Airship orks, was in the control cabin when the crash occurred.

"We got into a terrific storm with high winds, and the dirigible simply would not rise. I gave her more gas to get her up in the air, but she did not respond," he said.

"Rain was falling in such torrents that our ship was blown down to earth. She bumped twice slightly and then a terrific impact buried her nose into the ground. Immediately came a terrific explosion, followed by two lesser ones.

"Flames instantly engulfed the airship. I was shot outside my pilot window and found myself on the ground. At the moment of the catastrophe everybody aboard except myself and assitsant navigators were asleep. The motors were turning to perfection. It was the tempest which caused our destruction."

Two of the most important statements are those by J. H. Binks, engineer on duty in the after power station at the time of the catastrophe, and by Mr. Leach, quoted above.

Mr. Binks and Engineer A. V. Bell, whom he was relieving, were miraculously saved by a water tank bursting over their heads and cutting a waterway to safety for them through a wall of fire.

Mr. Leech further owes his life to his own Herculean strength which enabled him to bend girders which pinned him to earth and then scramble under others to escape the flames. Mr. Binks, whose only injury was the singing of his back hair, said tonight:

"I had just come down into the after power station to relieve Bell when he told me we were making heavy weather through thick rain and a high wind. As he was speaking we both noticed that the ship went over at a surprising angle but quickly righted herself again.

"We were making 65 knots at this moment when an order came through to slow down the engines. Immediately afterward the nose dipped and we got a second order to shut off the engines.

"We had hardly done so when we struck something. We could hardly believe it was the ground as we had no idea we were so near earth. But there was no time to think of that, as the forward engines exploded as we crashed to earth and waves of flame came rushing aft.

"At the same time water began pouring into the cabin. We thought at first the airship was in water but a second later we saw it was coming from the tank overhead which had broken and was flooding down on us.

"We crouched in the cabin away from the heat and flames. Then, seeing the water cutting a way for us right through the body of the ship, we dropped down and found that our part of the ship was some feet above the ground. So all we had to do was roll over and over in the wet grass with wet handkerchiefs over our faces to get away from the flames.

"Bell and I thought at first of helping to save others, but we saw in a flash that there was no chance for those forward, as the ship, by this time was a mass of solid flame in which they were imprisoned."

Mr. Binks and Mr. Bell together tried to visualize what had happened, but only knew from what they heard afterward that the ship had been manoeuvering strangely as it passed over Beauvais. They thought it was only being buffeted by a heavy wind but advanced the surmise that it might have dived into a wind pocket and, being at a height of only 800 feet, hit the top of the hill which is at an elevation of 700 feet.

Mr. Leech said:

"The dirigible had been going normally after the start from Cardington. It was weighed down by rain and it was difficult to make altitude, but ther seemed no cause for alarm. It was only when we were over Beauvais that I noticed the ship seemed to be acquiring a plunging motion. That may have been due to a break in the tail, but that is not sure and nothing of the kind occurred to me at the time. The tail may have been broken after the crash.

"I was thrown to the floor of the cabin by the shock of the explosion and pinned down by a bent girder, but I heaved it off and tore the outside of the cabin and got my head through before I was suffocated. Then I pulled my body through the hole, threw myself to the ground and rotlled away from the flaming envelope."

Assistant Wireless Operator Disley, who is among the survivors now in the hospital here, was not as strong as Leech. Trapped in his cabin he could not tear his way to safety through the fabric. After frantic efforts he finally fell exhausted to the floor of the cabin only to find that a hole had been burned through it. Through this hole he rolled out onto the wet beet field.

Volunteers Check Raging Forest Fire

Prisoners From Maryland Correction House Aid in Battle.

A raging forest fire, with smoke and flame visible for miles, in the vicinity of Laurel, Md., last night was reported under control and nearly 100 volunteer fire fighters sought rest after fighting the flames all day.

Prisoners from the Maryland House of Correction at Jessups Cut were sent under guard to halt the progress of the fire when it menaced a number of farm houses in the vicinity.

State police from the Laurel substation aided in spreading the alarm and organizing fire fighting brigades. The flames are reported to have swept the Langford farm, in the vicinity of the penal institution.

Entire Town Where R-101 Crew Lived Is in Mourning

Only Younger Children Play in Streets, Not Knowing Fathers Perished in Flaming Wreck; Merry Farewell Party Was Held Saturday.

London, Oct. 5 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The whole of the little village of Shortstown, which has grown up outside the gates of Cardington Airship Station, is in mourning today. Nearly all of the crew of the R-101 lived there, and most of them were married men who have left wives and children.

Squadron Leader E. L. Johnson, navigator of the ship, lived in an old farmhouse adjoining the airship station, with his wife and child. Wing Commander R. B. B. Colmore, director of airship development in the air ministry, who lived not far away, was the central figure of a merry farewell party at Bedford Hotel Saturday, when his wife and 13-year-old daughter said good-by to him.

On that occasion Colmore and his brother officers were presented by the landlord of the hotel with a nine-gallon cask of beer, entwined with the Union Jack and the Indian flag, which they took aboard the dirigible to drink on the voyage.

Many of the younger children played in the streets of Shortstown today. They have not been told that their fathers perished in the flaming wreck of the R-101.

There is a story told at Shortstown today of a night watchman at the Cardington Airdrome who saw the catastrophe in a dream. Dozing, he thought he saw the airship driven nose downward toward the earth until she crashed. He awakened in a cold sweat about 2 a. m. and telephoned the control tower, which told him that since the last o. k. message at midnight no news had been received from the ship.

RED SCARE TIGHTENS MILL PICKET LINES

Danville Watchers Grow in Number as Owners Exercise Vigilance.

SUSPECT IS HELD IN JAIL

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Oct. 5.—The claim today that the police had unearthed evidence of a plot by Communists to complicate the local textile strike by damaging physical property of the Dan River Mills resulted today in the strikers' picket lines being increased and in greater vigilance on the part of the mill management in protecting its plants. While Marvin Mahan denied any affiliation with the Communist party, stating that he was simply a railway man out of work, who had drifted here during the strike period, he was still being held in jail on a warrant charging him with inciting to violence because of alleged remarks made by him offering to provide dynamite to the strikers.

W. R. Murdock, of New Bedford, Mass., charged with distributing incendiary literature, also remained in jail, but was permitted to call a New York attorney and ask that the National Textile Workers Union send counsel here to represent him.

Officials of the union, members of which are on strike, seized upon the Communist development today to issue a statement through Paul Aymon, organizer, in which he asserted: "The mill management is playing into the hands of their foreign crew by refusing to deal directly with their fellow citizens." The charge also was made that as late as last June the mill management employed Dewey Martin, a member of the American Textile Workers Union, and that he was permitted to go to and from New York, where he was in contact with the Communist leaders.

Another inspiration meeting for strikers was held in the city park this evening, with union men from High Point, N. C., and other local officials bidding the strikers to maintain their present unity. They predicted that the strike would be won by this means.

The mill management has issued no eviction orders so far and it is reported that the few men admitted to the mills each day are "bedding down" the plants for a long period of idleness.

Police announced today that in searching Murdock's hotel room they had obtained a notebook with a number of local names and addresses in the mill section. When arrested and pressed for the names of members of the organiaztion in Danville, Murdock declined to reveal them.

Girl Helped Prisoner To Escape, Is Charge

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 5.—Mary Crummitt, 17, is being held for juvenile court action charged with aiding Harry Sibert escape from the Shenandoah County Jail at Woodstock early this week. She is said to have come to Middletown, near here, and obtained six saws from Sibert's automobile, and to have delivered them to him in the jail at Woodstock. Sibert, serving a year's sentence for a liquor law violation, had the saws in his shoes when recaptured.

Clyde Rosenberger, serving five years for burglary, was caught and Dayton Shifflet, accused of automobile theft, was shot twice by Sheriff Sheetz while trying to escape with Sibert.

Reduction in Tax Rate Discussed in Bedford

Special to The Washington Post.

Bedford, Va., Oct. 5.—The adoption of the budget with a reduction of 15 cents in the tax rate was the principal matter considered at an adjourned meeting of the town council held Friday night with Mayor J. W. Gillespie, presiding. The former rate was $1.75 on the $100, and the reduction brings it down to $1.60.

Plans for the year were discussed, and it was directed that all business firms having signs overhanging the street be notified to remove them. There is an ordinance prohibiting such signs, but it appears that it has not been enforced entirely. Electric signs which hang over the street must be approved by the light superintendent.

Self-Inflicted Wound Fatal to Blacksmith

Special to The Washington Post.

Frostburg, Md., Oct. 5.—John Moore, 58, died early today at Miners Hospital, from a gash in the throat, self-inflicted, while despondent over illness. He was found in a pool of blood in his bedroom by his sister, Mrs. Dennis Boyle, with whom he made his home. He used a razor, according to the authorities, and missed the jugular vein about an eighth of an inch.

Moore had been a blacksmith at the Eckhart Mines of the Consolidation Coal Co. for 40 years. In recent years he conducted his shop, one of the few remaining in this territory. He is survived by one other sister, Mrs. Della Crawford, Philadelphia, and two brothers, James, Baltimore, and Daniel, Cumberland.

Culpeper, Va., Oct. 5.—The handsome home of A. J. Wood, at Brandy, 7 miles north of here, was completely destroyed by fire believed to have started from a defective flue.

Three school teachers who boarded at the Wood home lost part of their belongings in the fire. Carter R. Hall, who rented an apartment, and Edgar Freeman, father of Mrs. Wood, both invalids, were taken out. Mark Pulliam, a nephew of Mrs. Wood, lost all of his clothing and a large amount of old jewelry, which had belonged to his mother and grandmother. The total loss was estimated to be about $15,000 with insurance of $11,000.

G. O. P. VERY ACTIVE IN GARBER'S BEHALF

Party Is Trying to Overcome Handicap of Absence of Name on Ballot.

DEMOCRATS ARE SURE

Special to The Washington Post.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 5.—Seventh District Republicans are leaving nothing undone to keep Representative J. A. Garber in Congress, it was revealed here yesterday, the last day for the registration of voters, and are very unwilling to concede his defeat to Judge John W. Fishburne, Democrat, in the November election.

Democratic leaders who have felt that it is all over in the Seventh but counting the votes, admitted today that the Republicans showed unusual activity in lining up voters, even more than was shown during the Hoover landslide of 1928. Democrats do not seem to have taken as much interest in the registration as the Republicans.

Garber's supporters feel they will be able to overcome the absence of his name from the official ballot by increased registration of voters. Garber failed to file notice of his candidacy in time with the secretary of the Commonwealth and his name will have to be rubber-stamped on the ballot. Reports from the meeting of the Democratic central committee at Richmond last Wednesday were to the effect that party leaders regarded Garber out of the race because of his failure to file.

President Hoover carried the Seventh District in 1928 by 4,000 votes, while Garber was elected by only a few hundred. As the district normally is Democratic, neutral voters are wondering whether the increased activity by the Republicans means that Judge Fishburne faces a real fight to be elected, or whether the G. O. P. is determined to hold Rockingham, Shenandoah and Page Counties in line for the county elections next year.

Garber was county treasurer of Rockingham before he was elected to Congress. There is much talk that he will seek his only county post should he not be reelected to Congress. This is one explanation for the increased activity by the Republicans in behalf of Garber now. County treasurers in Virginia are important factors in qualifying voters, because they keep a check on the payment of poll tax prerequisite for voting.

The Democratic leaders, meeting with the Democratic State central committee at Richmond, decided to concentrate their fight in the Second and Ninth districts, now held by Republicans. Not only in these districts will the Democrats devote their campaign funds but they will center their "big-gun" speakers. Senator Claude A. Swanson told the Democratic leaders that this is a Democratic year and the prospects are bright for a clean sweep in Virginia for Congress.

BERLIN IS BLESSED WITH 5,000 VEREINS

All Officially Registered With Many More of Less Formal Nature.

GERMAN GREAT JOINER

Berlin, Oct. 4 (A.P.).—The old witticism that when two Germans meet they organize a "verein" would seem based on fact in the case of the German capital, which is blessed with no less than 5,000 "vereinie" registered with the authorities, not to speak of thousands of others which are of a less formal nature.

Of these 5,000, the largest single group is that of clubs and associations devoted to athletics. There are more than 1,000 such "vereine" registered.

Another large group is pledged to health and uplift of the youth. Some 270 organizations are devoting their energies to the latter.

Pupils in the schools of Berlin are organized in 80 "vereine," parents in only 18. There are 270 college students' organizations. Lovers of the theater are banded together in 70 "theatervereine," and those who wish local history and traditions to be preserved, in 50 registered organizations.

An enumeration of German societies would be unthinkable without singing societies. Berlin boasts of 47 large male, mixed and ladies' choruses, not including countless church choirs which are not registered as such. To these must further be added 45 musical societies.

Radio fans, postage stamp collectors, amateur photographers, huntsmen, chess players—even the wearers of long beards—all are organized, as are also Berliners interested in chemistry, politics, religion, history, medicine, natural sciences, law, languages, astrology, occultism and bibliography.

Membership in a "verein" from cradle to grave appears to be the motto, for in addition to the many welfare organizations taking care of babes there are fourteen burial societies, which see that even mourning is organized properly.

Vita-Minutes
with NO OTHER PAPER

Consider for a moment how important to the advertiser is the time of day when his shopping message gets to readers. It is quite as important as the season of the year, or the day of the week.

Only in the morning, in fact after a night's rest, and before the day's activities have exerted their drag, are minds most open to suggestions. Only morning minutes are Vita-Minutes.

And advertisers in the Washington market address Vita-Minute minds by using The Post. For that's when the morning Post is being read . . . during the wide-awake, responsive Vita-Minutes.

Indeed, The Post is the only messenger from the outside which reaches most households at the time of day when the day's plans are being made!

Alert, active morning minds seek news and store news—use the morning Post in planning the day's activities.

Tired evening minds seek relaxation and recreation . . . books, theaters, magazines, bridge, movies.

"Show-me" advertisers have checked The Post's coverage of Washington and the surrounding counties whose buying center is Washington. They've discovered that The Post, coming to the breakfast table, being read during the Vita-Minutes, does have a large and very definite influence upon thousands of shopping lists. Every day's sales in every line of merchandise are directly influenced by advertising in the morning Post.

Representatives of The Post will gladly show you authentic, convincing facts.

ALEXANDRIA MASONS ARE GIVEN PORTRAIT

Oil Painting of W. H. Lambert, Preserver of Relics, Presented Lodge.

HELD OFF UNION ARMY

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

A large oil portrait of the late William Lambert, who served as worshipful master of Alexandria-Washington Lodge No. 22, A. F. M., from 1860 to 1866, and later as grand master of Masons in Virginia, has been presented to the lodge and hung with the portraits of other distinguished members. The painting is from the brush of Mrs. Eugenie DeLand Saugstad, of Arcturus, and was copied from an old photograph of Mr. Lambert in Masonic regalia.

Mr. Lambert is credited with being probably more responsible than any other man for preserving intact the priceless relics of the lodge, including the original charter, which bears the name of George Washington as the first worshipful master. The occupation of Alexandria by Union soldiers in 1861, while he was master, at first appeared to be a serious menace to the safety of the valuable possessions of the lodge. Demands were made on him for admittance to the temple, and when this was denied, threats of violence to both his person and the institution, were made. Mr. Lambert appealed to the provost marshal, who placed a guard at the door of the temple and saved the cherished mementos now to be seen in the temple.

In 1871 the city hall, in which the Masonic temple was located, as it is now, was destroyed by fire, and the Masonic museum, with a large part of its contents, was burned. Again Mr. Lambert came to the front and was most active in saving the precious relics, being the last man to leave the burning building, and risking his life several times. A list of the articles burned or stolen at this time is in the possession of the lodge, but Mr. Lambert insisted that certain articles among which were four flags—one used by the Alexandria company in the Revolution, the flag of Gen. Washington's life guard, that of the Richmond Rifle Rangers in the Revolution, and that of the Independent Blues, of Alexandria, used in the War of 1812-1814—were moved from the fire, although no trace of them could be found then. About five years ago these four flags were discovered in the garret of a building in Alexandria, and are being restored, preparatory to placing them on exhibition in the lodgeroom.

A son of Mr. Lambert, Arthur, who for many years has made his home in St. Louis, but who made a special trip to Alexandria to obtain the degrees of the order from his father, is now the oldest living member of Alexandria-Washington Lodge—the oldest in membership, though not in years.

The erection of the new George Washington Masonic National memorial temple, which is nearing completion on Shooters Hill, on land at one time the property of General Washington, may in a sense be attributed to the fire in 1871, for since that time it has been recognized as a necessity to have a fireproof depository for the relics of the lodge, which are literally priceless. Starting as a local project, the idea was adopted as a national one, and the temple is being constructed with funds contributed by every grand lodge, every subordinate lodge, and every individual Mason in the United States, and will cost, when completed, approximately $4,000,000. It is expected it will be completed and dedicated at the bicentennial celebration of Washington's birthday, in 1932.

Miss Sue Lee Wheat, aged 68 years, whose home has been at The Plains, Fauquier County, for a number of years past, died Saturday morning at the Washington Sanitarium, Tacoma Park, and the body was brought to Wheatley's funeral home, 809 King street. The funeral will be at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning from St. Paul's Episcopal Church, and burial will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery. She was a daughter of the late Robert W. and Susan Harper Wheat, of this city.

The deceased is survived by a sister, Mrs. Minnie A. Herwig, now living in Newport, R. I.; three nephews, Robert W. Wheat, of this city; Maj. Henry Herwig, U. S. A., retired, and Maj. Robert Herwig, U. S. A., now on duty in Tein Sein, China, and a niece, Mrs. enjamin Dutton, of Newport, R. I., the wife of Commander Dutton, U. S. Navy.

Charles W. Elliott, second planning engineer of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, will address the meeting on Thursday evening of the newly appointed doning commission and the city officials.

Founder's Day will be observed October 12 by Fitzgerald Council No. 459, Knights of Columbus, with a banquet to be served at 7 o'clock that night at the George Mason Hotel, when the speaker will be Dan S. Hollenga, business manager of the chamber of commerce.

Robert H. Forman, who has been selected as the executive secretary of the Voters' Service Club of Arlington County, which has for its object better government, last night announced the appointment of Mrs. Mary E. Lockwood as director of the woman's branch of the club.

"The policies of the club, which has been in existence for the past year, but has had no publicity, will be to select the men best suited for the various county offices at the election to be held in 1931; to obtain their histories and be in a position to give to all members of the club all data necessary, that they will be in a better position to cast their vote on election day," Mr. Forman said.

Contining, Mr. Forman said: "We are not dissatisfied with our officials; in fact, many may be associated with this movement as club members. We do not propose to go out and build up a large paid-up organization. There will be no dues or by-laws in this organization."

Mrs. Lockwood stated last night that the women will work for better civic conditions in the county and seek those men for office who will work for the betterment of Arlington County regardless of party lines.

"We shall have an absolutely constructive view point and will get behind any county man seeking office who has the interest of the county at heart," Mrs. Lockwood said.

Not to be found in old packages

FOOD and other groceries in A&P stores are always fresh because they are sold quickly. New supplies, therefore, are constantly coming into these stores. Nothing stays on A&P shelves long enough to become stale.

For this reason you find in A&P stores only the latest packages put out by the manufacturers. Sometimes these packages are smaller than the old ones. Sometimes they are larger. But the manufacturers often leave the prices of their packages unchanged on account of varying costs.

This is why sometimes you get a smaller or a larger package in A&P stores than you get in other stores which sell the same goods. Old packages are never to be found where sales are rapid.

THE ILL-FATED R-101.

The dirigible R-101 bore out the direful predictions of a great many Englishmen when she crashed and exploded in the vicinity of Beauvais, France, on the first leg of her round-trip flight to India. The R-101 was the sister ship of the R-100, which was flown from England to Canada and return not long ago. Both these ships have had more critics among Englishmen than friends. The fact that the R-100 was badly battered in the flight to Canada and that the R-101 met disaster on her first major flight seemingly indicates that the criticism was well founded.

The R-101, as well as the R-100, was rushed to completion. Great Britain is anxious to beat Germany in the race for lighter-than-air supremacy and the ships were designed primarily in the hope of outmoding the Graf Zeppelin. While Dr. Eckener was getting his ship into the air, the British forces at work on the R-100 and R-101 were straining every muscle to get their ships into the air. When they were finished it appeared, from the delay in launching them, that they were not up to the mark. The R-100 was altered and adjusted and finally sent on the flight to Canada. The R-101, meanwhile, was torn asunder and lengthened by the insertion of an additional central "bay." It is not unlikely that she was weakened structurally by this remodeling.

The primary cause of the disaster, however, is the fact that the R-101 was filled with hydrogen to give her buoyancy. Hydrogen is one of the most highly inflammable of gases. When the R-101, burdened by a rain-soaked skin, was unable to maintain altitude and brushed against the ground, it appears probable that her structure collapsed. Only a tiny spark was needed to set off her gas bags and complete her destruction.

It will be a great pity if this disaster should result in general opposition to the development of dirigibles. Two huge airships, work upon one of which has been inaugurated, are to be built for the United States Navy at Akron. These ships, as are all American lighter-than-air craft, will be given their buoyancy with helium, a noninflammable gas. Should they meet with an accident such as befell the R-101 they might collapse structurally, but they would not explode. It is important that experimentation with lighter-than-air craft be continued. No one knows whether or not the dirigible is destined to become the merchantman of the air, but lighter-than-air craft, if they can be made safe, have undeniable advantages over heavier-than-air craft. The worth of the dirigible can be proved only through experimentation.

The R-101 disaster proves the folly of operating hydrogen-filled dirigibles. The United States, which has a practical monopoly on the world's supply of noninflammable helium gas, is in a peculiarly fortunate position to develop genuinely safe dirigibles.

NEEDLESS FIRE WASTE.

Carl W. Bergquist, newly elected president of the National Safety Council, said recently: "We have reached a point in use of the automobile which was reached some time ago in industry, when machines had been made as safe as possible and we had to concentrate on educating the workman to work safely, not only in his own interest, but those of his fellow employes. We must concentrate on educating the automobile-using public if we are to reduce the toll taken by traffic." Mr. Bergquist's statement is applicable not only to the problem of highway fatalities but equally to the problems of fire prevention. As a text for fire prevention week the statement can not be improved upon.

In proclaiming the week of October 5 as fire prevention week and inviting the cooperation of all in the prevention of fire waste and the consequent procuring of individual benefits and increased national prosperity, President Hoover said: "The North American continent leads the world in the amount of its annual fire waste, one year of devastating losses following another, each, with but few exceptions, establishing a new high mark in the amount of valuable property burned and in the magnitude of economic losses, property losses alone in 1929 exceeding $470,000,000." In 1920 the annual fire loss for the first time jumped above the $400,000,000 mark. In 1922 it reached $506,000,000. Year by year the losses increased until in 1926 the figure had reached $560,000,000. In the years since, the loss has gradually been reduced. In 1927 the sum was $473,000,000 and in 1928 $472,000,000. Public education in the prevention of fire largely explains the fact that the annual loss now seems definitely to be on the down grade.

The annual per capita fire loss is estimated to have been $3.93 in 1928, as compared with $4.01 in 1927, $4.79 in 1926, $4.85 in 1925, and $4.90 in 1924. At least 15,000 human lives are lost annually as a result of fires in the United States. The cost of fire is borne by all. It is reflected in commodity prices and directly governs the level of insurance premiums.

Of recent years great progress has been made toward the development of genuinely fireproof structures. Insurance companies and professional firefighters have studied fires and their causes scientifically, with the result that improved practices have been worked out calculated to reduce the number of fires and to minimize losses. Generally, American fire departments have been developed to a point of high efficiency. It remains now only to educate the public to its individual responsibility with respect to the prevention of fires. National fire prevention week, set aside for the purpose of familiarizing the public with means whereby it can minimize its fire losses, is of extreme importance.

FOR PEACE IN CUBA.

The Cuban Congress having authorized President Machado to suspend constitutional guarantees in the Havana area until election day on November 1, it may be assumed that the plotters against the peace and safety of Cuba will walk warily. The government is armed with overwhelming powers and can exercise them with dispatch.

Naturally, the "liberal" agitators of the United States profess great indignation over the extinction of "individual liberty" in Cuba. Although the powers granted to the government may not be exercised, and are designed solely to meet an emergency, it is fashionable among "liberals" the world over to distort self-defense measures by governments into acts of tyranny. "Liberals" contend that revolutionists in all countries should be left absolutely free to accomplish their work. When bomb-throwers and anarchists are placed under restraint it is brutal tyranny.

President Machado has had the courage to meet a deadly menace to the independence of Cuba by asking for extraordinary powers and by giving notice that he will exercise them if necessary to preserve peace and public order. That he is supported by the people of Cuba is proved by the vote of the congress. Cuba is fortunate at this juncture in possessing a chief executive who is ready to do his duty. His prompt and decisive action has probably put an end to the danger of wide disturbances. The government of Cuba will stand.

BOOTLEG LIQUOR PRODUCTION

One of the first innovations in prohibition enforcement announced by Director Woodcock when he took office was the establishment of a division of research and public information to function within the Prohibition Bureau. The division was created for the specific purpose of acquainting the public with progress made in and the status of enforcement. The division now publishes a monograph entitled "Possible production of illegal liquor in the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930," designated by Col. Woodcock as representing "a scholarly and unbiased effort to find the truth." Emphasis is laid on the words "possible production." "It is not scientifically possible to ascertain the exact amount of alcoholic beverage consumed," says Director Woodcock, "but a fairly close estimate can be made of the amount that might be produced by surveying the production of those commodities from which liquor is made, accounting for all the legitimate uses to which these commodities are put and assuming that the balance could be converted into alcoholic beverages."

The principal sources of illegal liquor are, for the making of distilled spirits, corn, cane and beet sugars, corn meal and other grains and molasses; for the making of wine, grapes, raisins and fresh fruits and berries; for the making of home brew, hops and malt. To liquor derived from these sources must be added diverted industrial alcohol renatured and smuggled liquor. The bureau estimates the following total production of bootleg liquor in the fiscal year ended June 30, last: Spirits, 73,386,718 gallons; wine, 118,476,220 gallons, and beer, 684,447,800 gallons. The total possible production in this year came to 876,320,718 gallons.

The last year of normal full production of legal alcoholic beverages was 1914. In that year there were withdrawn, tax paid, the following quantities of beverage liquors: Spirits, 143,447,227 gallons; malt liquors, 2,056,407,108 gallons, and wines, 52,418,430 gallons. The total came to 2,256,272,765 gallons. Disregarding the fact that the 1914 figures do not include the homemade wines, &c., upon which no tax was paid, the bureau estimate of possible production in 1930 shows that only about 40 per cent as much liquor could have been produced in 1930 as was withdrawn, tax paid, in 1914. Reduced to absolute alcoholic content, only about 35 per cent as much was probably produced for illegal uses in 1930 as was withdrawn, tax paid, in 1914. These figures seemingly prove that statements made from time to time that the consumption of alcoholic beverages is as great or greater today than prior to the adoption of the eighteenth amendment are unwarranted.

If only 40 per cent as much liquor is being consumed now as was consumed in 1914, it may be said that prohibition enforcement is 60 per cent effective. This is not a poor record, by any means. But, despite the meticulous care with which the Prohibition Bureau attempts to substantiate its estimates, and although it stresses time and again the fact that the study is nothing more or less than "a careful survey, with the facts and figures carefully revised and presented and the formulas given as prepared by experts in their line of Government service who have had the greatest experience in dealing with the subjects involved," the statistics and the conclusions are nevertheless still subject to challenge. Anything can be proved by figures. The booklet itself points out the widely divergent conclusions reached by two experts as to the volume of beer produced in 1925. Starting with substantially identical figures as to hops production, Hugh F. Fox, secretary of the United States Brewers' Association, found that the total absolute alcohol consumed in beer that year came to 45,508,000 gallons, while Prof. Irving Fisher found the figure to be 6,975,000 gallons. As the study points out: "Different research workers arrive at diverse conclusions, although they all start with the same basic material."

"Possible production of illegal liquor in the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930," seems destined to precipitate a bitter controversy. The wets, who recently announced that a careful, unbiased study indicated that the annual American liquor bill has jumped to $2,848,000,000 as compared with the $1,817,000,000 bill of 1913, will find some way to challenge the accuracy of the Prohibition Bureau's findings.

WASHINGTON'S CANAL

Washington Correspondence of the Christian Science Monitor.

Tucked away in the woods of Virginia on the west bank of the Potomac River within a stone's throw of the road traversed by thousands of motorists on their way to Great Falls Park lie the masonry locks—surprisingly erect after 130 years—of the "Potowmack" Canal, the first lock-canal project in the United States, sponsored and built under the direction of George Washington.

Engineer no less than statesman and soldier, the first President early visualized the advantage of joining the waters of the rich inland valleys with tidewater. Pioneering in an engineering project which was designed to surmount the Great Falls of the Potomac and eventually permit the flow of commerce from Chesapeake Bay to the Ohio River, he blasted his way through the granite cliffs of the Potomac and connected the river above and below the Great Falls by a series of five masonry locks.

As a permanent contribution to the celebration of the George Washington Bicentennial in 1932 it is proposed by various governmental agencies, cooperating with the American Engineering Council, to restore the locks of this old canal and set aside a park dedicated to the engineer Presidents. To date, Washington and President Hoover are the two bona-fide engineers who have occupied the White House. While the park is primarily designed to honor Washington, it is also planned to place by his side his presidential successors who combine engineering and statecraft.

Developments have multiplied to draw to a focus the various agencies interested in founding the park. The Cramton act, passed by the last Congress, authorizes the preservation of both banks of the Potomac from Mount Vernon to and including Great Falls, as a public park. The "Potowmack" Canal lies within this area.

Surveys of the canal have been completed by the United States engineer office, under supervision of Maj. Brehon Somerville. The National Capital Park and Planning Commission has made a historical study of the canal. Estimates of expenditures required to restore the locks and erect a building to house a working model of the canal for public exhibition have been worked out by the American Engineering Council. Definite ground plans for the park to surround the canal have been prepared. The George Washington Bicentennial Commission is cooperating to advance the project.

In its present state the canal is a mute witness to the courage, perseverance and foresight of Washington and his associates. With comparatively crude tools they essayed to overcome within a distance of 1,600 feet a drop in the water level of the Potomac amounting to 70 feet. At the point below the Great Falls where they planned to bring the waters of their canal into the river again there was a sheer granite cliff more than 50 feet in height.

How these engineering feats were accomplished is a story that has been preserved only in fragments. Bits from Washington's diary and from the accounts of travelers tell of the uphill financial victory which gradually was won, and which little by little enabled the work to be completed.

Construction of the gates for the locks involved experiment. The channels and pivots in the stone walls where the gates lifted or swung are still clear-cut. Great trees have taken root and grown out of the masonry walls that line the locks, sometimes forcing out of line several of the stone blocks. On the whole, however, the walls are still standing with sufficient preservation to reveal the mathematical exactness with which they were erected.

The woods of Virginia have long ago ceased to echo to the notes of the boatsman's horn as he called for admission to the canal, but the worn towpaths and locks of this engineering achievement of the new Republic still may be found beneath the leaves and among the shrubbery.

Ohio State Journal: So many bad accidents have occurred lately when stills blew up in residences that it might be a good idea for the State to provide a bureau for the inspection of home brewing and distilling equipment.

Five-Billion-Dollar Country.

Portland Press-Herald: Congress made provision for the expenditure of approximately $4,800,000,000, some say of $5,000,000,000. Less than 5 years ago it cost $3,000,000 to run the Government. When Tom Reed was speaker of the House the Government expenditures ran up to a billion dollars. Some one in Congress was shocked by the appropriations which were made and Speaker Reed met the criticism by saying: "You are now living in a billion-dollar country." Paraphrasing this remark we might now call attention to the fact that we are living in a five-billion-dollar country.

100,000 DEAD.

According to the definite figures for the three years just past and the best of estimates and indications for that part of the present year which has now elapsed, we have, since the beginning of 1927, made an automobile record of 100,000 fatalities in this country, says the Syracuse Post-Standard. And it is in this country where most of the killing is done.

American deaths in automobile accidents reached the total of 25,000 in 1927, the figures being those of the National Safety Council. In 1928 there was an addition of 27,000 killings. And last year's figures went up to 31,000. That made 83,000 in three years, only 17,000 short of a six-figure total.

And there is every evidence that the 100,000 mark has now been reached, and, in all probability, passed. Figures since January 1 are obtainable only in special reports and estimates, but they do not indicate an ebbing of the tide of death.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE TOILERS.

God give them peace and plenty and bless the homes they keep,
When ends the long day's toiling may restful be their sleep.
May many a joy repay them for all the pains they bear,
And may our Nation's workmen in all her glories share.

The toilers at the furnace, the toilers in the field,
Translate their strength in iron or in the harvest yield.
In bricks the mason sings us the poems of his clan
And every door and archway proclaim the workingman.

A few there are who toil not and have no bouts with care;
They walk the realm of pleasure to and with boredom there,
But all the Nation's workers with duty spend their years
And earn their right to laughter whenever mirth appears.

God bless the Nation's toilers and let their dreams come true,
May happiness reward them for all the tasks they do.
May blossoms deck their gardens and love their homes maintain,
And pride's sweet satisfaction make worthwhile every pain.

Gold Usually Is Polished, But It Isn't the Polish That Makes Gold.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

SOME years ago a young man confessed to me his ambition to be a gentleman. He had contrasted his own people, who were poor and unpolished, with the fine folk described in story books, and he was shamed by a hopeless sense of inferiority.

Later, in another town, he blossomed out as a fashionably dressed club member keenly interested in sports and in due time blew out his brains when an auditor found the shortage in his accounts.

His ambition to be a gentleman, which was quite sincere, had prompted him to dress and talk and act like those he envied, and doubtless he learned to believe himself a gentleman while associating with them on terms of apparent equality. The idea that a willingness to steal would end all hope of his becoming a gentleman did not occur to him.

Doubtless you will think him stupid, yet his understanding of the qualities that make a gentleman was characteristic of America.

In many parts of the country there are young people, born in poverty and vulgarity, who feel forever doomed to inferiority because of their humble origin.

Also there are people born to wealth and luxury who are quite sincere in the conviction that birth so fortunate has made them inherently superior—regardless of their conduct or their character.

Both classes are snobs, and both are ignorant.

Gentlefolk are the progeny, as commoners are, of lousy and unwashed ancestors. But many generations of wealth, luxury, cultivation and family pride have made them a superior product. Proof of their superiority is manifested in many ways, but chiefly and finally in the absorbed standards that cause them to value honor above all other things.

These standards—this pride in honor for honor's sake—may be the property of the poorest, and together with a dislike of all things vulgar may afford proof of true gentility.

And without these standards, wealth and fine manners serve only to cloak a pretense.

America has many "gentlemen," quite sincere in their consciousness of superiority, who are merely dressed-up trash.

It has many others, both rich and poor, who make no claim of superiority and yet are the finest of gentlemen without knowing it.

PRO AND CON

Various Aspects of Political Issues Discussed by the Press.

G. O. P. Split in New York.

Houston Post-Dispatch.

As might have been expected, action of the New York Republican convention in nominating a renegade dry to run for governor and adopting a prohibition repeal plank did not meet with the approval of many of the Republican drys, and the very logical thing has happened. The up-State drys of the Republican faith have decided to put a dry candidate in the field for governor. Without a dissenting voice, they have agreed upon Prof. Robert P. Carroll, of Syracuse University, as gubernatorial nominee of the third party.

It is problematical how many votes he will be able to draw from the nominees of the two major parties, but this much is certain: He will divert far many more from Charles H. Tuttle, the Republican candidate, than he will from Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic candidate. What dry strength there is in New York State is chiefly within the Republican party. Any considerable vote for a third party dry, therefore, would weaken the Republican party far more than it would the Democratic.

The New York State Republican organization's strategy apparently is to appear wet and therefore remove objections of New York City wets, while hoping to concentrate behind it all anti-Tammany forces. The defeat in this startegy is that Roosevelt, the Democratic nominee, is not a Tammany man, never has been in sympathy with Tammany's rotten methds, and, moreover, has sponsored the investigation of Tammany corruption which is now under way. It will be difficult to smear Roosevelt with the Tammany stick when it was he who took the probe of the organization's alleged irregularities out of the hands of local officials and sent the attorney general of the State to New York City to take charge of the inquiry.

Whatever the split in the Republican party over the wet-dry issue amounts to, it would seem to be a development plainly in favor of Roosevelt's chances for reelection Ordinarily there is not a wide margin of votes between the Republicans and Democrats in New York gubernatorial elections. A moderate defection from the Republican ticket by the drys would make Roosevelt's return a certainty.

Hoover and Tuttle.

New York Times.

Comment there has been on the fact that President Hoover has as yet not sent his good wishes to Mr. Tuttle. Praise of the latter's work as district attorney was contained in the letter which Mr. Hoover wrote, accepting Mr. Tuttle's resignation, but there was not a word to indicate that the President had even heard of the Republican nomination for Governor in New York. It has been felt that the contrast is marked between the President's congratulations extended to Mr. Morrow in New Jersey and his silence respecting Mr. Tuttle in New York. Both men take virtually the same view of prohibition—a view contradictory to the one which Mr. Hoover has held. Possibly he makes a subtle distinction between a candidate for the United States Senate and a candidate merely for the highest office in the State. But such a refinement will be lost on most American voters to whom such niceties are unintelligible. They will continue to ask why the President should be enthusiastic for Mr. Morrow, who is for the repeal of prohibition, and should keep aloof from Mr. Tuttle, who is also for repeal, in a State election which may be critical for Mr. Hoover's own party.

Secretary Stimson has come forward as if for a reluctant administration. He felicitates Mr. Tuttle and hopes for a triumphant Republican campaign in New York. But even Mr. Stimson says nothing about repeal of prohibition. Besides, he is not the President.

Chicago.

Chicago Tribune.

Here is a city even more notorious than it deserves for its clownish maladministration of public affairs, for the rustic rascality of many men in public office, offending all the simple precepts of decent behavior and common honesty, loud mouthed and loutish in public appearances and dependably predatory behind closed doors. Its general reputation ignores the fine realities of its private and civic enterprise and centers upon its record of homicide and murder, of brutal racketeering, extortion, and corruption, its faltering justice and incompetent administration. It will be asked to give the only convincing proof it can that its spirit is for a reform of its public affairs, and if it does not give this proof in the character of the mayor it selects it can expect to have its mood observed as one of empty sound and fury, signifying nothing.

The political action of the people of Chicago must produce a mayor and a city government of character and ability, or Chicago in opening its world's fair will be a rowdy with a black eye.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Dr. Tom A. Williams Wonders Why District Is Not Provided With Swimming Facilities.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It has been very gratifying during the past summer spent in Washington, the first here in six years, to note the great development of outdoor games and to note the gain in the appearance of health among the people.

In this respect Washington is no exception, the general interest in athletics throughout the world being one of the factors in the deliberate effort to attain good health, which is one of the signs of our industrial age.

In one respect, however, Washington has been reactionary and that in a field where on account of the summer climate it can ill afford it. I refer to provision for facilities for swimming.

A few of us who have had access to private pools may not have realized the deprivation from which others suffer since the forbidding of bathing in the Tidal Basin. At the best, however, pools are less sanitary than open water, and many infections of the nasal passages and ears result therefrom. I was one of the advocates of the Tidal Basin swimming beach, having seen the benefit derived from such beaches in Minneapolis and other cities by the Great Lakes, not to speak of those on salt water. A great many of my own patients sent to the Tidal Basin for rebuilding profited greatly, and not one of them developed infections there, although it was alleged that the water of the Potomac contained the germs of typhoid and summer dysentry.

A considerable number of people continue to swim in the river, in spite of the difficulty and inconvenience of bathing there. Neither the public health service nor the city health department has been able to give me any data to show that the Potomac water above Rock Creek is seriously contaminated, and it is from this water that the Tidal Basin used to be filled daily on the ebb tide. Surely a large body of water like this, renewed daily, provided less liability to infection than the best of closed pools, especially when we take into account the purifying effect of sedimentation, oxidation, and extremely powerful ultra violet radiation of the summer sun in Washington.

After several discussions I am writing this in the hope that the civic bodies of the District of Columbia will find a way to dispose of the administrative difficulties which have led to the abolition of the bathing beach, which was of such great benefit to the thousands of persons who remain in Washington during a summer, and that the District committee may find a way to provide proper bathing facilities in a suitable situation.

Rev. Ralph Eller, Quoting Capt. Robert Dollar on Prohibition Benefits, Says Wets Can Never Win.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We must keep prohibition! We must have an airtight enforcement!

Capt. Dollar, head of the prosperous Dollar Steamship Co., which has kept the American flag on the high seas around the world, recently said: "If I have to serve liquor on my ships, I shall give up and go broke."

"Prohibition has been a Godsend to this country, and above all, to the poor people," continued Capt. Dollar. "Under prohibition money which went to the saloon and the liquor seller goes to the store for clothing for women and children; it goes into the banks. There are hundreds of millions of dollars saved each year because of prohibition, and of these millions much is invested in automobiles and other recreation."

The wets can never win!

Agrees That State-War-Navy Building Is O. K. as Is.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I agree with your correspondent that it would be wanton waste to remodel the State, War and Navy Building. There is enough Grecian architecture under way here to satisfy the greedy classical architects. Washington will soon be a forest of Ionic, Doric and Corinthian columns.

The effort of Mr. Mullett, the supervising architect, who designed the structure, was to originate a type of American architecture. The building, is a remarkable substantial one and should be permitted to stand until something better is devised.

An architectural genius could no doubt remodel it at slight expense and add greatly to its appearance. But let's call a halt on Greek columns and be somewhat more original. Our new business buildings are all right.

America Won't Kill Its Speculators, But Congress Should Investigate Some of Them, He Writes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sirr Mussolini is going to impose death on speculators who cause economic disaster such as we had. Russia already is shooting them. Wall street would look like a grave yard and crape would be hanging out everywhere, if we decided to treat our speculators roughly. No doubt something severe must be done to some of our speculating multimillionaires. Congress should investigate them. Killing them is not in accord with our ideas, although Italy is going to do it. Speculation is the life of our country, but it is growing beyond economic safety.

LUTHERANS TO ACT ON DIVORCE CAUSES

Question of Liberalizing Stand to Come Before Conference.

PLAN SEMINARY MERGER

Milwaukee, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—The question of liberalizing its stand on divorce, long one of the controversial problems of the church, will be up for possible decision at the seventh biennial international convention of the United Lutheran Church of America here Tuesday.

The attitude of the United Lutherans, representing approximately half of the followers of Martin Luther in North America, has been divided for several years. Originally only one ground for divorce was recognized—adultery—but the increasing number of divorces granted on charges of desertion has brought forth the contention it also is just cause.

Six years ago, a committee was named to find a solution. Its report was the first made at Richmond two years later. It recommended adoption of a rule recognizing desertion, but the convention overwhelmingly disapproved of the findings.

Two years later at Erie, Pa., the committee again submitted a report similar to the first. This was not wholly rejected, and, in fact, portions were adopted.

Final action on the adoption or rejection of the remainder of the report was postponed at that time until this year. In substance, the committee recommended that the church take the position that the marriage bond is effectively dissolved on two grounds only—the "sins of adultery and malicious desertion." The question of remarriage for divorced persons and their admission into the church should be investigated by the minister and his subsequent actions should be the result of his own convictions, the report said.

A proposed merger of four prominent Eastern theological seminaries controlled by synods affiliated with the church may also be determined.

The proposed merger involves the Hartwick Seminary, of Cooperstown, N. Y.; the Mount Airy Seminary, Philadelphia; Gettysburg Seminary, located on the famous old battlefield, and the seminary attached to Susquehanna University at Selings Grove, Pa.

Coupled with this is the question of whether the United Synod of New York had the right to authorize the transfer of the Hartwick Seminary from its present site, where it had been located for 133 years, to Brooklyn.

APPOINTING OF NEW JUDGES IS SOUGHT

the volume of business was increasing more rapidly.

The report showed that on June 30 there were approximately 7,000 more cases pending in Federal district courts undisposed of than on the same date last year. The number of cases last June awaiting action was 155,730 compared with 148,566 the previous year. During the year approximately 9,500 more cases were initiated than in the previous year, 198,475 for 1930 compared with 188,915 for 1929.

Increases in Court Action.

Most of the increase was in bankruptcy and private suits, with only a slight increase in Government suits.

A total of 24,307 civil Government cases were initiated in 1929, of which 11,237 related to prohibition. Last year 24,934 were begun, including 11,882 prohibition cases.

Government criminal cases begun totaled 86,348 in 1929 and 87,305 in 1930, including 56,786 prohibition cases in the former year and 56,992 last year.

The total prohibition cases brought by the Government in 1929 was 68,023 and 68,874 in 1930. Of the 35,849 criminal cases pending last June 22,671 dealt with prohibition.

Chief Justice Hughes said Attorney General Mitchell had been requested to report on various plans for reorganization of the Federal judiciary with the object of meeting the problems presented by the present congestion.

The conference hopes to have this information at its meeting next year when it will decide whether to recommend creation of additional judgeships or reorganization of the present districts.

Women Report Gains In Nationality Fight

Miss Alice Paul, a member of the National Council of the Woman's Party, has cabled from Geneva that 40 of the 52 votes at The Hague conference have been pledged for a reconsideration of the convention on nationality.

The reopening of this question will revive the question of the need of the equality of sexes in all matters pertaining to nationality, said the Woman's Party. The United States refused to sign The Hage convention because of its discriminations against women.

SOVIET WHEAT HEDGING IN CHICAGO, NORMAL OPERATION

Russian Short-Selling Is Discussed by Fisher

Confusing Interpretation Placed on Act by Grain Pit Members and Secretary Hyde; Usually Results in Public Benefit.

By IRVING FISHER,
Professor of Economics, Yale University.

Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 5.—Operations of the Russian Soviet government, both in its short-selling and "dumping" of wheat on foreign markets, are puzzling. The testimony of Basil W. Delgass, former official of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, the Soviet commercial agency in America, tallies with that of Secretary of Agriculture Hyde. The property of Mr. Delgass was confiscated and he was sentenced to death by the Soviet government. He says the Russian government is "depriving its own people of the things they desperately need in order to dump them abroad at cheap prices, as a means of creating disorganization, discontent, and revolution in other countries."

Secretary Hyde is equally positive that the Russians aimed a blow at the American farmer in their short-selling at Chicago, depressing the price of wheat. Their action is also interpreted as trying to make a speculator's profit by circulation of false rumors, similar to the forged telegram sent from Winnipeg stating that the Canadian wheat pool was in difficulties.

"Hedging" Considered Normal.

On the other hand, the Russians reply that their Chicago operations were the familiar ones of "hedging," and President Bunnell, of the Chicago Board of Trade, reminds Secretary Hyde that this body is the "recognized world market, and hedges, protecting grain in all positions all over the world, are customarily placed here." James E. Bennett, of Chicago, also recalls that under the government of the czar, it was "thought quite proper to hedge Russian wheat in the greatest hedging market of the world."

Yielding to pressure from Secretary Hyde, however, the directors of the Chicago Board of Trade have resolved to bar short sales by a foreign government as "objectionable." but Board of Trade officials have told the House committee investigating Soviety activities that in this case they appeared to be legitimate "hedging" operations.

In conference with Secretary Hyde, Silas Strawn gave it as his opinion that the Russian operations did no real damage. A deal involving only 7,650,000 bushels during several months could hardly affect a market in which some 60,000,000 bushels are bought and sold daily. If the Russian operation was really a hedging operation, it was doubtless beneficent rather than injurious. From this point of view hedging would act to lessen the risk of a change in price. The Soviety government would buy wheat in Russia of the peasants and simultaneously sell it in Chicago; later they would sell in London and simultaneously buy, that is, cover, in Chicago. The theory is that the London price and the Chicago price would move in sympathy, which is nearly always true; so that any losses suffered in Chicago would be recouped by a gain in London, and vice versa.

As pointed out in my book, "The Nature of Capital and Income," the effect of hedging on those who engage in it, for example the wheat dealers, is manifestly to enable them to work on a smaller margin of profit. In consequence, the public receives a benefit in the smaller fluctuation in prices. The case is similar to that of a building contractor, who can reduce the cost of building to his client by disposing of his own risks, with the exception of the risk on labor. He makes contracts to be supplied with all materials when needed, at fixed prices. Those who take these contracts assume the risk of fluctuation in price in the special materials in which they deal. Thus they relieve the contractor of the necessity of informing himself of the special market conditions for stone, brick, timber and so on, and he can make a closer bid for the contract.

A Parallel Case.

Just as the public gets the benefit of such a shifting of risk in the form of reduced cost of building, so it gains by hedging operations in wheat. Fluctuations in price are less sharp and wide because of short-selling and "covering" the sales.

If the claims of the Russians are correct, and the Amtorg carried on the marketing of wheat and other products in accordance with the time-honored practices of the exchanges, these operations were dictated by economic necessity rather than political policy. As a matter of fact, all short-selling has to be followed by the buying of an equal amount to "cover" the sale. So the report has come from Chicago that the Russian agency which sold wheat short, later bought wheat futures to cover these sales. The whole transaction was a part of its marketing operations to sell surplus wheat abroad.

A further explanation lies in the Russian necessity to obtain capital for the Soviet industrialization plan. To do this it must export its products abroad, even though this involves sacrifice on the part of the Russian populace. In the circumstances it is unfortunate that Russian wheat should be thrown upon the already glutted world wheat market to the obvious disadvantage of American and Canadian farmers. Those who regard it as a hostile move with the intent to stir up discontent abroad, may find plenty of evidence to support this view. Those closest to the movements of the wheat market, however, are inclined to scout it, and to point to the futility of hedging operations to force the price of wheat to a lower level. As Russia must export in order to pay for her imports, it would seem more likely that she would try to create a scarcity in order to force up the price of wheat and the other exports she has to sell.

STOCK PRICE LEVEL SHOWS SHARP DROP

Decline Brings Eleven Groups Under Low Registered in November Crash.

SLUMP IS WORLD-WIDE

By E. W. DIEFENDORF
(Irving Fisher Service).

The bears tore deep gashes in prices on the New York Stock Exchange last week. Eleven of the twenty stock groups fell on Tuesday under their lows in the November crash. The Irving Fisher index of all common industrial stocks suffered during the slump a loss of 16 per cent from the September 10 high of 137.7, down to 115.5 on September 30. This point was 5.9 per cent under the November 13, 1929, low.

The gains made from last week's low to the close were sufficient in several groups to bring the level up with a net gain over the week. The motors group, up by 5.5 per cent from the week's low, shows a net gain of 1.3 per cent over the week. The groups of office equipment, foods, electrical equipment, stores, chemicals and utilities gained by more than 3 per cent each from the week's low, and closed the week with net gains of from 0.6 per cent in the utilities group to 1.3 per cent in the office equipment group.

Agricultural equipment stocks continued to lose ground through October 2, closing the week up by less than 1 per cent from the low, and off by 5 per cent from the preceding week's close. Those groups whose advance late last week was insufficient to make much impression on the easly week losses, were auto accessories, off by 5 per cent; building supplies and machinery, off by 3 per cent each; radio and amusement, tobaccos and rails, off by 2 per cent each; and oils, coppers, preferred stocks, household equipment, steels and miscellaneous off by 1 per cent or less than 1 per cent. All groups except tobacco and radio and theaters, which were 19 and 14 per cent, respectively, above their November lows on September 29, were under their declines made last November.

Values Traded Up 11 Per Cent.

The New York Stock Exchange denitely emerged from its inactive summer period as the average daily value of tradings in all stocks last week rose by 11 per cent to $171,400,000, and in common industrial stocks by 8 per cent to $133,000,000.

The rails group was prominent in daily tradings last week, with the value traded rising by $3,300,000. Of the seventeen groups whose turnover increased last week, the oils, radio, motors, utility, preferreds, chemicals and miscellaneous groups rose by more than $1,000,000 each.

The coppers, steels and tobacco groups dropped off by slight margins, with the largest declines in values in Anaconda, International Nickel, Vanadium, Bethlehem Steel, McKeesport Tinplate and United States Steel.

Major Markets at 1930 Low.

With stock price levels in New York dropping to record lows, those of foreign exchanges have taken a sympathetic decline. Indexes for Paris, London and Berlin were at 1930 lows last week. The rate of decline in Paris and London showed an increase over the preceding week's change, while the Berlin level was steadily dropping by but 0.7 per cent, compared with 5.8 per cent for the preceding week.

From the 1930 high in the week ended April 11, London stock prices dropped by 30 per cent to August 22, at an average weekly rate of 1.6 per cent per week. From August 22 to date, London prices have dropped by but 2.6 per cent, or at an average weekly rate of 0.4 per cent.

The situation has been similar in Paris, with the stock price level off by 24 per cent from April 11 to June 20, or at an average weekly rate of 2.4 per cent. From June 20 to date the drop has been but 1.8 per cent, or at an average rate of 0.1 per cent per week.

The Berlin stock price level reached its 1930 high for the week ended May 23, and dropped by 22 per cent to August 15, at an average weekly rate of 1.8 per cent. From the August low to date, this index has dropped by 2.5 per cent, or at an average weekly rate of 0.4 per cent.

Foreign stock price levels are both at their 1930 lows, and under their 1929 lows by wide margins. At last week's close the London index was 32 per cent, the Paris index 26 per cent and the Berlin index 24 per cent below their 1930 peaks, yet the foreign exchanges have presented a firmer and more stable position during the past month than does the New York Stock Exchange, which is taking the slump that the foreign exchanges suffered during the summer months.

All Grades Make New Lows.

All the graded industrial groups dropped to 1930 lows on September 30. The price level of the investment group of stocks at 155.4, off by 14 per cent from the September high, was 8 per cent above the low in the November break, while the semiinvestment and speculative group indexes dropped under their November lows by 10 and 16 per cent; these suffered in the recent slump, losses of 18 and 25 per cent, respectively.

But the speculative group proceeded to make consistent gains from the September 30 low to the week's close, advancing by 5 per cent, while the investment and semiinvestment groups suffered slight drops on October 2, and closed the week up by 4 per cent from their lows.

WHOLESALE PRICES IN RAPID DECLINE

Commodities Continue Falling, With Dollar's Purchasing Power at New High.

FOREIGNS ALSO WEAK

Optimism that was founded on the relatively stable condition in the wholesale commodity market during August and the first three weeks of September, has been lessened by the rapid rate at which commodity prices have been dropping during the past two weeks. The Irving Fisher index of 120 commodities fell by 0.96 per cent last week to 82.3, or 0.6 per cent under the previous low of 82.8 for the week ended August 22. Commodity prices have been active, with the falls far outnumbering the rises. The index has dropped from 83.6, the peak in the recent advance, by 1.56 per cent in the last two weeks.

The purchasing power of the dollar is again at a new high of 121.5, with the dollar in wholesale markets worth 21.5 cents more than it was in 1926.

Foreign Commodity Prices Weak.

The Irving Fisher indexes of foreign wholesale commodity prices indicate no better conditions abroad than at home. The indexes for France, Germany, Italy and England are all at record low levels, with the weekly rate of decline indicating no improvement in conditions last week.

Commodity price levels in England have had an unbroken downward trend, while the levels in France, Germany and Italy had short periods when conditions looked better during the summer. During the past three weeks all four indexes have been on the decline.

Farm Products Drop to New Low.

The weakness that was evident in the wholesale commodity market two weeks ago became more pronounced last week, as the price levels of agricultural products and nonagricultural products both dropped to new lows. The slight recovery that raw materials and agricultural products staged during August and early September was nullified, and the slump in price levels was renewed.

Raw materials fell off by 1.58 per cent last week, compared with a loss of 0.84 per cent for the preceding week. Declines were chiefly in apples, cotton, wheat, hay, hides, beef, hogs, tobacco and wool. Semimanufactured and finished goods dropped to new lows, with the rate of change but 0.53 and 0.59 per cent, respectively, compared with losses of 1.17 and 0.47 per cent for the preceding week. Copper, lead, tin, turpentine, oils, burlap, ginghams, caustic soda, flour, ham and sugar were largely responsible for the decline in these two groups.

The fuel and lighting and miscellaneous groups made slight gains last week. The remaining group indexes dropped, with farm products off by 2.87 per cent; foods, by 1.00 per cent; textiles, by 1.75 per cent; hides and leathers, by 0.73 per cent; metal products, by 0.33 per cent, and chemicals, by 0.12 per cent. The textiles, metal products and chemicals groups recorded new lows last week.

TRADINGS IN BONDS GAIN IN NEW YORK

Average Daily Value Rose 12 Per Cent; Volume, $12,600,000.

U. S. SECURITIES FIRM

(Irving Fisher Service.)

The 0.2 per cent drop in the bond price level last week was insufficient to cause the weekly index to fall. It indicated that the price level was stabilizing at the record high, and was the largest decline that bond prices have suffered since the rising trend began early in July.

The average daily value of tradings on the New York Exchange rose by 12 per cent last week, following the preceding week's rise of 34 per cent, and bringing the average daily volume figure to $12,600,000—the high since the week ended April 10.

The group indexes in general displayed weakening price levels, with foreign government bonds off by 0.40 per cent; industrials bonds, off by 0.33 per cent; second grade rails, off by 1.07 per cent, and utility bonds, off by 0.09 per cent. First-grade rail bonds continued strong, closing the week at 106.0, the peak for this year, with a gain of 0.42 per cent last week. United States Government bonds continue firm at a high level, which has been held for the past three weeks.

SOME OF MACHADO'S FOES LEAVE HAVANA

Three Weeks Remain Before Cuba Congressional Elections Are Held.

RIGHTS BELIEVED SAFE

Havana, Oct. 5 (A. P.)—With one of the most eventful weeks in the recent political history of the republic just concluded, Cuba today turned to face other weeks potentially as significant.

Scarcely three weeks remain before the senatorial and congressional elections are to be held. It was because of this scheduled event in Cuba's Republican routine, that President Gerardo Machado resolved to take extraordinary measures to maintain order during the remainder of the electoral period.

He chose to revive an old Spanish law calling for suspension of constitutional guarantees and asked that he be given the right to put this law into effect if grave emergency should necessitate it during the three weeks remaining before elections.

A special session of congress remained in convention throughout Friday night and yesterday the request was made a law. Immediately the tension that had been noticeable in some quarters diminished. There was an immediate exodus from Havana of some opposition leaders.

It is believed President Machado will make no effort to suspend constitutional rights as long as the republic remains tranquil. This, coupled with the return today of United States Ambassador Harry F. Guggenheim, is generally expected to go a long way toward keeping things orderly through the electoral period.

SEASONAL INCREASE IS NOTED IN TRADE

Gains Shown by Both Retail and Wholesale Houses in Fifth District.

COLLECTIONS ARE SLOW

Richmond, Va., Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Seasonal increases are noted in both the retail and wholesale trade by the Fifth Federal Reserve District Review.

Retail trade in the district in August showed about 5 per cent increase over July trade, but average 5.6 per cent below the business done in August last year, according to reports received by the officials at the Bank of Richmond from 34 leading stores in the district. Total sales this year through August 31 were 1.5 per cent less than sales from January 1 through August a year ago, the district statistics show.

Stocks on shelves of 34 reporting department stores decreased 1.2 per cent during August, and on August 31 were 8.1 per cent less in retail selling value than stocks on hand August 31, 1929. The reporting stores turned their stocks over .243 times in August, and since January 1 stocks have been turned an average of 2.125 times, a slightly higher figure than 2.066 times for the corresponding period last year.

Collections during August in 33 of the 34 reporting stores averaged 23.6 per cent of receivable outstanding on August 1, a lower figure than 24.5 per cent collected in August a year ago. The report showed collections were generally slower in August, 1930, throughout the district, 25 stores reporting lower percentage this year, 7 reporting higher percentages, and 1 reporting the same figure.

There was some seasonal increase in wholesale trade in August in the district, sales in groceries, dry goods and shoes being larger than sales in July, with especially large gains in dry goods and shoes. In comparison with sales in August, 1929, however, sales in August this year in all lines were smaller, declines ranging from 10.3 per cent in groceries to 29.3 per cent in dry goods. Total sales in the first eight months of 1930 were lower in all of the five lines for which data were available than sales in the corresponding period of 1929.

Collections in groceries in August this year were slightly better than in August last year, but other lines reported lower percentages in 1930.

When Economic Study Was Young.

When the study of economics was in a more elementary state it quite often happened that glib phrases were substituted for real analysis. One critic of the study once said: "If you want to make a first class economist, catch a parrot and teach him to say 'supply and demand' in response to every question asked him."

Three Causes Affect Price Level.

The general level of prices depends upon three main causes: (1) the quantity of money in circulation; (2) its "efficiency" or velocity of circulation (or the average number of times a year a dollar is exchanged for goods); and (3) the volume of trade (or amount of goods per year bought by money).

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

Montgomery Ward.

C. Y. L.—I own outright 20 shares Sears Roebuck. Would you advise trading this stock for Montgomery Ward, Cities Service or some other listed stock? I am interested in both yield and appreciation, and since holding this stock the market has fallen from $181 to the low of this year. Will appreciate any advice you may have to offer.

Answer—Advice along such lines is rarely, if ever, given in this column. It must be left to the judgment of the individual as to whether or not it would be advisable to sell any stock with a view to purchasing another. However, in this instance, Montgomery Ward, especially from an investment viewpoint, appears much more attractive than either of the other two named. The company pays yearly dividends of $3 a share. At the prevailing price of about $35, the yield to the investor is approximately 8.6 per cent. Earnings ratio to price is 11.7 per cent. Sears Roebuck, paying $2.50 cash, plus 4 per cent in stock, yields on the investment at present prices only 3.6 per cent. Earnings ratio to price is identical with that of Montgomery Ward. Cities Service, paying 30 cents cash yearly and 6 per cent in stock, returns on the investment a somewhat smaller amount than either of the other two. Nevertheless, in view of the company's strong physical and financial condition, its present and prospective record breaking earnings and the fact that it is constantly expanding in a most commendable manner, the stock has decided attractiveness for long term holding.

Penick & Ford.

G. V.—I am told that Penick & Ford is retiring its preferred. Is this correct? What didivend is paid on the common?

Answer—On July 1 8,890 shares of preferred were retired. All but 8,895 shares of the $4,000,000 preferred issue remain to be redeemed. The entire bond issue was called for payment last year, and when the remaining preferred is out of the way, there will be no fixed charges ahead of the common. For the first six months earnings were $2.14 per share, as against $2 in the same 1929 period, and profits of $3.93 for 1929 are expected to be exceeded this year.

Common dividends of $1 per annum were resumed last December, following a lapse from 1927. The stock appears to possess some attraction.

Consolidated of Cuba.

F. B. M.—Please give me some facts and an opinion of Consolidated Railroads of Cuba.

Answer—The unfavorable sugar situation in Cuba and the cloudy outlook as a result of the opening of the new central highway in Cuba make the stock unattractive. The preferred is selling to yield about 11 per cent and is highly speculative and should be avoided. The Cuba Railroad, a subsidiary, recorded a decline in the net earnings for the nine months ended with March of 2½ per cent. All of the common stock of Cuba Railroad is owned by the Consolidated Railroads of Cuba, but its preferred stock is listed on the New York Stock Exchange and is an inactive issue.

Goodyear Tire and Rubber.

W. G. M.—I am thinking of buying Goodyear Tire and Rubber. What do you think of this stock? Can you give me some information on American Founders and United Founders?

Answer—There has been considerable selling of Goodyear Tire and Rubber stock recently because of the unfavorable situation confronting the tire and rubber company. Overproduction is reported and price cutting is under way, these two factors never making for favorable earnings. The company plans to curtail its production beginning with this month. First half year earnings declined 56 per cent, amounting to $2.02 a share on the common. This is after marking down raw materials to cost or market value, whichever was lower on June 30 last out of current earnings. Dividends are $5 a year, but there is some question whether this rate will be maintained in view of the sharp fall in earnings and unfavorable outlook.

Because of the past successful operations of the American Founders Corporation the stock appears to have considerable attraction for strictly long pull holding. United Founders is more of a holding company rather than an investment trust, and is not restricted in its investment policy as the American Founders Corporation is. As a result, the shares of United Founders are not as popular among investors as those of others in the same category.

Allen Mfg. & Electrical.

W. G. M.—Please give me what information you have concerning the common stock of the Allen Mfg. & Electrical Co. Has it ever paid dividends?

Answer — The company recently moved its operations to Lawrence, Mass. The Allen Mfg. & Electrical is acquiring small concerns, and recently took over the Detroit Radio Corporation. In June directors of the Pilot Radio & Tube Co. approved a transaction with the Allen, which held a license from the Radio Corporation of America, and associated companies, under which the Pilot company would transfer the assets of its radio tube manufacturing division to the Allen company, in consideration of which the latter would issue 219,800 shares of capital stock to stockholders of the Pilot Radio & Tube Corporation.

The new no-par stock to be issued in the form of a stock dividend to shareholders of Pilot Radio are being traded in on the New York Produce Exchange. No dividends are paid on the stock.

Packard Motor.

A. S. W.—Please give me any information you can regarding the Packard Motor Co.

Answer—Weakness has developed in Packard recently because of the earnings outlook. It appears likely that Packard will have to dip into suprlus to cover the $1 dividend on its stock this year. The company is in a strong condition financially and is well able to maintain the rate if the stagnation in the automobile industry is not too protracted. For the six months ended June 37 cents a share was earned on the 15,000,000 shares of stock.

July was a dull month and operations were carried on at a slow rate. Considering the fact that the outlook for the automobile industry for the remaining months of 1930 is not so good, Packard must be regarded as rather speculative, although dividends could be paid out of surplus if not earned should directors see fit to do so.

Driver-Harris.

F. E. R.—Kindly give me an idea of the earnings trend of Driver-Harris.

Answer—Earnings are showing a good increase over last year. Income for 1930 is estimated at about $15 per share, as against $9.61 on the common in 1929. Driver-Harris is in good shape, with the ratio of current assets to current liabilities 15 to 1. Increase in profits this year are expected as a result of metallurgical developments under way, one of which is a process for resmelting stainless steel scrap. Experience in the alloy field has placed the company in a big way for development of stainless steels, which should be reflected in larger profits. The outlook appears good.

Mrs. Ralph Bangs was matron of honor and wore a pale pink lace gown ankle length with ruffles on skirt, and she carried pink roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Dick C. Old Mattresses made Modern

THERE are thousands of people right here in Washington who are being robbed of sleep by their mattresses.
Felt or hair mattresses in constant use will eventually "pack." Some develop a sink in the middle. They do not permit the body to fully relax.
There is one kind of mattress which does not pack and that is our Coil Spring Mattress shown above. We can make such a mattress out of your old one.
We will take the old felt or hair and sterilize it—clean it—and use it as a covering for the resilient springs. The ticking will be new. There will be ventilators in the side. The mattress will be the equal of those costing $40.00, but by using the material in your old one the cost to you will be only $12.50 to $22.50.
Phone today for our van to call and submit samples of charming tickings from which to make your selection.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THERE was a shock for Herluf Provensen, announcer of Station WRC, when he learned that tragedy had stalked in the wake of his vivid description of "Pioneer Days," which included an Indian attack, at the Army carnival here one day last week.

Two little boys heard the broadcast over the national network in their home in Utah and immediately decided to go out and play Indian, taking with them a loaded shotgun. It resulted in one of the youngsters accidentally killing his brother.

In the Washington Gas Light Co. program Saturday night, George B. Fraser, vice president, speaking hopefully of business conditions, said his company sold $50,000 worth more of gas appliances last month than in any previous month in the company's history.

Looking as if life, in what is still referred to by some as the great open spaces, agreed with him, former Radio Commissioner H. A. Bellows, of Minneapolis, is here to convince the Radio Commission that Station WCCO ought to be among those authorized to increase their power to 50,000 watts.

GEN. JAMES G. HARBORD, chairman of the Board of the Radio Corporation of America, will deliver an address on "Radio's Place in World Communications" at a meeting of the Washington Board of Trade tomorrow night.

In connection with the address, Gen. Harbord plans to give some practical demonstrations of radio by obtaining contact not only with ships at sea, but also with cities in different parts of the world.

Annette Hanshaw, contralto, once owned a music store. As she was unable to read a note of music Miss Hanshaw would play the numbers by ear, furnishing her own interpolations and pretending to be reading the sheet music.

After purchasing the songs, many of the customers would return the next day to inform her that when they played the music at home it didn't sound the same as her renditions.

BY use of microphones and loud speakers production men may now sit in their glass-inclosed booths and give instructions to those rehearsing in the broadcasting studio adjacent without having to run back and forth.

Heretofore this running back and forth over a space of some 50 feet not only caused a loss of valuable time, but tired out the people as well.

Nat Brusiloff, the CBS dance orchestra conductor, is a brother of Leon Brusiloff, of the Fox Theater Orchestra.

Looking ahead. H. H. Ramsay, vice president of the United States Golf Association, will comment on the new type of golf ball, larger and lighter than the old one, WABC, Tuesday, 6 p. m., Germaine Girous, of "Ladies All," will discus how a French woman makes up for street and stage, WMAL, Wednesday, 10 a. m. "The Mutiny of the Bounty," by James Whipple, WMAL, Wednesday, 8:30 p. m. "The Fast Freight Visits Texas," WMAL, Wednesday, 8 p. m. Irvin Cobb will pull a few new ones, WRC, Wednesday, 10:30 p. m.

FROM the Greenville Piedmont: "Einstein says the radio among nations is an instrument of peace. It will have to do better than it has done in some neighborhoods we know."

Aare Interprets the Mode

New York, Oct. 5.

WHY should beauty be considered a feminine prerogative?

Ah, can I not remember full many a more or less heated argument on this subject among the art students idling away between class hours at neighboring cafes!

I must admit that there were so few on the side of masculine beauty that one could not help but wonder how many clever women and how many centuries it has taken to develop in the human mind the idea that woman was more beautiful than man.

Yet for actual symmetrical beauty, the beauty that is built upon virility and strength, there is hardly any question in the intelligent mind on the subject.

Men are more beautiful than women!

But they are not the seekers for and keepers of beauty that women are, and that is undoubtedly the reason it is only a thinking person who can really appreciate masculine beauty.

All of which only started out to ask you if you had noticed how the ensemble idea was absorbing our men folk in recent years? Not alone the tie and handkerchief, but socks, suspenders or belts, shirts, the color of the suit as well, must harmonize today. And it is an absolute fallacy that all the frightful ties in the world are gifts to men from women . . . instead, it is the mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts who are invariably behind the wearing of every really good looking tie!

• • • •

It's the sleeves and neckline that count this year! Why, you can take any dress in your wardrobe that has even fairly good lines, and by adding just the right sleeves and appropriate neckline, have a completely new dress! So what do you think I have just gone and done for you? Why, made an illustrated leaflet of 40 sleeve and neck designs! Every successful sleeve and neckline of the season is there, plus a couple of our own that are pretty good, if you ask me. Forty new sleeves and necklines for a stamped, self-addressed envelope sent to the Dare Department of The Washington Post.

The black dress with the white vest in all of its simple glory! That's another practical dress from Bernard et Cie. that I have illustrated for you today. And then just because I have to be artistic as well as practical, and to prove to you that the couturiers have to be the same, there's a ravishing tea gown from the same designer which really couldn't be called practical—even though it should be and is delightful!

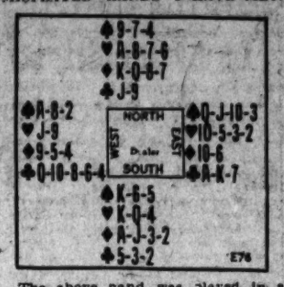
WORK ON BRIDGE

MISPLAYED HANDS I HAVE MET.



The above hand was played in a Duplicate championship game of Auction Bridge at the last tournament of the American Bridge League; South obtained the contract with a bid of one No Trump.

At Contract Bridge South, with a count of 13, three suits stopped and three cards in the remaining suit, would have bid one No Trump; and North, having a count of 10, would bid two No Trumps. That would be the final bid as the opponents are not strong enough to either bid or double; and South has bid the full extent of his hand.

West opened with the Six of Clubs (the fourth best of his longest suit); dummy spread his hand and Declarer realized that he was in trouble—dummy had No Trump assistance, but not in the right suits. It makes no difference which card dummy plays; East will win with the King and return the Ace. On the second trick West played the Four of Clubs, showing at least five cards in the suit; and as West had opened with the Six, East could tell by the use of the Rule of Eleven that West's Clubs now were solid—six from eleven left. five higher, and all five had appeared in the dummy and East hands.

East now led the Seven of Clubs which West won and cashed his two remaining Clubs. On them East discarded the Six of Diamonds and the Deuce of Hearts. Then West cashes his Ace of Spades, making six tricks for East and West; so the Auction Declarer made one-odd—his contract.

Was there any error in this play?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

At trick 2, West should have played his unnecessarily high Ten on the Ace of Clubs to give his partner the "change of suit" signal and ask for a lead up to the Spade weakness in dummy. Had he done so and had East responded with the Queen of Spades, East and West would have taken the first eight or nine tricks—nine if South had covered either the Queen or Jack of Spades with the King.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

The Good Sport Girl.

WELL, despite the return of long skirts, curls, and waistlines, the girls have not changed much. They are still laboring under the delusion that the way to be dangerous is to be a "good sport"—which means almost anything from lending money to doing the proposing and supporting the family. Wrong idea. No man on earth ever got a thrill from being proposed to, being waited upon or being supported. And no man on earth ever loved a woman who assumed the role that belongs to man and did for him the things he should have done for her. Men resent these eager women who are rushing in and "helping" things along. They resent having the joy taken out of life. They may submit. They may accept all that is done for them, but in their hearts they are merely amused at the woman who thus bestows what she should sit back and receive. If you doubt it read Linda's experience.

Dear Miss MacDonald: I just want to speak my mind about men who graft from girls. The men today are getting cheaper and cheaper, but I think this one deserves the crown as the cheapest of them all. He is a college man, but not a successful one. In fact, I guess he is a failure. However, I went with him at college and expected we would some day get married. I have done well and now have a salary that few girls enjoy, and a cozy apartment, radio, &c. He has just stuck. We have gone together steadily now for seven years. It was two years ago that he began saying that he could not afford this and could not afford that—small entertainment such as movies twice a week. This in spite of the fact that I never expected to go to a regular show or ever out to dinner. Three nights a week we had dinner together at my apartment—which saved him the price of his own meal, for I purchased everything. He never offered to bring along so much as a bit of fruit. I did not mind, as I am the good-sport type, and what I have I like to share. Well, for three years I have been rushing home from the office to broil a steak, or fry a chicken three times a week. And he has been taking it all and saying nothing.

About two months ago he began staying away. I asked him what was the matter. He asked me what I meant and if I thought I owned him. It surprised me so I could not think straight and probably said the wrong thing. I told him I did not think I owned him, but certainly supposed we were to marry. He flew up in the air and said he would not marry me if I were the last female left on earth and slammed out of the house. Then it all dawned upon me that he had deliberately come to tell me that. He said some other things too unmanly to mention. The next day I could not go to the office, I was so ill. But in a day or two every bit of interest in him died. I now realize he was just a habit and an expensive one. He is being fed by another girl now. I hope he gets used to the new cooking.

Did you ever hear of any one so cheap? The last three years he even had Christmas dinner at my apartment—everything supplied by me. He gave me a book each year! What do you make of him? Isn't he a prize? He owes me about $50, as he was always broke the day before pay day. Now I am going with a man who will not let me do a thing. He has sent me a beautiful set of window boxes because I took such pleasure in my plant. He is always worrying over my being tired. I never remember being even asked how I felt in all the years I was acting as cook to a grafter. What do you think of my experience? LINDA.

Typical, Linda, typical. But for goodness' sake, learn by the lesson and do not spoil the new man as you did the other, although they are different types. The new one would probably drop you at once the moment you started to assume the man's role. He is a man. The other was just what no name has yet been found for! However, girls are to blame that they exist. If they are ostracized their number would decrease. As it is, their name is legion, because girls encourage their existence and humor their conceit. Congratulations upon your escape.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Sarah was sitting very primly on her chair at her mother's tea party when one woman, looking straight at her, remarked to another, "She's not very p-r-e-t-t-y, is she?" spelling out the word.

Sarah's eyes flashed. She spoke up sharply. "I may not be very p-r-e-t-t-y, but I am s-m-a-r-t!"

Not all children are quite so well able to show up their elders, or, if they are, they do not have the necessary spirit. Often they carry away from a casual remark a wound to their self-esteem which lasts long after the remark itself be forgotten.

Certainly they suffer much more than we realize from the comments which adults feel free to make about them. Especially is this true when it is some one whom the child loves who makes these unkind observations.

It is always a mistake to discuss a child in his presence. If we praise his personal charms we make him self-conscious and conceited. If we discuss his faults, we emphasize them in his own mind, making him unhappy and causing him to feel inferior.

If we discuss such things as his illnesses, his poor eating habits or difficulties in going to sleep at night, we are apt to make him regard these characteristics of his as very important. In any event he will realize that they are an excellent way of getting attention and will capitalize them to get more of it in the future.

A child has enough to contend with without being handicapped by self-consciousness. If you must talk about your child do it when he is well out of earshot.

Remember that every problem of adjustment, of discipline and of habit training is made doubly difficult if your child knows that you consider it important enough to discuss.

SWISS STEAK.

(Bureau of Animal Industry.)

3 pounds of lean beef about 2½ inches thick.
3 tablespoons melted suet.
½ cup of flour.
1½ teaspoons salt.
⅛ teaspoon pepper.
2½ cups of hot tomato juice and pulp or hot water.

Sift the flour, salt and pepper together and beat through into the steak with a meat pounder. The beating makes the meat more tender and the flour absorbs the juice. Cut the steak into individual portions if desired.

IDEAL DAY FOR HEALTH.

DR. ELLSWORTH HUNTINGTON says the ideal day is one on which the average temperature is about 65 degrees and the relative humidity around 90. To make this day nearly perfect, from the health standpoint, the temperature should range through about 4 degrees at different hours of the day and night.

There should be sunshine without cloud or fog, and the air should be relatively free from dust and smoke. A certain limited amount of atmospheric electricity is desirable. Furthermore, this ideal day should come at the end of a period of nice weather, culminating in a drop of about 10 degrees. In other words, Huntington gives the palm to slightly cool days following others that have been a little warmer.

He thinks the climate of southeastern England comes as near as any to being ideal from the health standpoint. The qualities of a healthful climate he gives as: A considerable number of days meeting the standards; a fair degree of variation in temperature, humidity, and winds; a certain degree of seasonal variation but no great extremes of heat or cold; steadying effect of a large body of water; a fair degree of freedom of the air from dust and smoke; no excess of clouds, fogs, and rain.

These conclusions are based on studies of the death rates of New York City over a period of several years, paralleled by a study of the weather conditions for the same period. This was checked with a similar study of the weather in relation to health, made in Stockholm, and with various British reports. It is in accord with the conclusion of the author based on previous studies.

The opinion of Huntington on weather and health which has caused more discussion than any other relates to the advantage of season and change. Most health resorts advertise the even balminess of their climates. Huntington contends that the most healthful climate is one where there are some storms and winds, some clouds and rain, and some variation in temperature.

PIN UP THE GARTERS.

M. T. G. writes: In re garters:

"What is good for a horse is good for a man." The famous driver, John Murphy, found the tape used to secure bandages sometimes worked injury to the tendons, so he cut off the tape and used safety pins. I followed suit, and one day when garters were constricting my legs I threw them aside and pinned the stockings to my drawers with safety pins. It worked admirably, and I have never worn a garter since.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

DO'S AND DON'TS FOR OCTOBER GARDENERS.

OCTOBER 15 is a good time to begin to prepare the beds for next spring's planting of roses. Rigidly destroy, by burning, any leaves of established roses that show a tendency to black spot. Dust the remaining foliage with Massey dust, a preparation composed of nine parts dusting sulphur and one part lead arsenate.

Every effort should be made at this season to get rid of all pests which hibernate in any form; a few hours spent in this work will be well repaid.

Be sure to burn all foliage cut from beds or borders. Do not allow this to lie around. It is not only untidy, but it will aid in spreading disease and will materially increase the number of insects which will appear in the spring.

Drain the lily pond, bird bath and other water receptacles and cover them with boards.

This is the time to start crocus, narcissi, hyacinths and tulips intended for indoor growth. When potted bury them outdoors in a well-drained, protected spot.

Just because the garden season is drawing to a close is no reason why we should declare an armistice in the war on weeds. Indeed, this is one of the most important times to continue the fight.

Whenever possible hardy bulb planting should be timed so as to allow six weeks for root formation before hard freezing begins. If necessary, apply a mulch to keep the ground open.

Slacked lime is a great sweetener and general improver of garden soil. It can be applied in the fall by merely scattering it on the surface and then letting the rain carry it down to the feeding roots.

This is a good time to set out peonies. They do best in rich, well-drained loam in full sun. When planting, cover the crowns not less than two inches nor more than three inches deep.

Native dogwood is readily propagated from seeds gathered when ripe. Mash the berries in water to separate the seeds, dry them for a few days and plant one inch deep outdoors.

Do not forget to pot a plant of parsley in light soil. This will take up little room on the kitchen windowsill and will supply plenty of sprigs for garnishing through the coming cold weather.

What Today Means to You

"LIBRA."

IF October 6 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 a. m. to 10:30 a. m., from 4 p. m. to 5 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 a. m. to 8 a. m., and from 2 p. m. to 3:30 p. m.

Influences on this date will tend to make it more of a play day than a work day, and sports and pleasures will be pursued with avidity. Many rumors will be afloat—let time prove or disprove them before taking them to heart. Portends good health.

The child born on this October 6 will have a fertile and practical mind, and will have cultured and refined tastes. It will make friends slowly, but will seldom break a friendship. Will be resourceful and able in execution. It should have a rigid and vigorous nature.

You have a very hearty, generous, honest nature, which appeals to most people. You are not handicapped with either an inferiority complex nor a superiority inflation. You would be likely to make a success in the active buying and selling sales of business. You have a rather suave and nimble tongue and persuasive ways. You delight in the actualities of things, and you are better as a performer than a director. Experience will always be able to teach you much more than professors or books.

You do not accept life quietly and indifferently—there is a great deal of thrust and drive, energy and enterprise about you. You do not wait for Providence or some kind relative to give you a chance—you make your own openings, if there be no ready-made gates to the paths you want to pursue. You are not afraid to do more than is expected of you. You make work your play. It is seldom that you lose control of your temper, but fire is often seen in your eye, and people usually "turn tail" without a fight. You introduce a fine spirit of sportsmanship into your daily life.

You are interested in the affairs of the world and you are very cosmopolitan-minded. You are too interested in the thrills of the world to care much for fiction, of which you read very little.

2. John W. Griffiths, naval architect.
3. George Westinghouse, manufacturer.

CHAPTER 1.

"A LADY to see you, sir."

Robin Smith looked incredulously at the elderly housemaid standing in the doorway of his small room. He was a young man of about 27, tall and slender, with pale face, light gray eyes and sandy hair which looked gray and blended with the pallor of his face. His strongest feature was his nose, which was aquiline and firm, yet sensitive, as a poet's nose should be. For Robin Smith was not only a poet, but a good poet, whose star was only just beginning to rise in a world slow to acclaim followers of the Muses.

It was surely not extraordinary that a lady should call on a young poet. Yet Robin Smith did look incredulous. It was quite obvious that he was not used to having lady callers, and of all times, early in the morning. He stared at the housemaid, who seemed to share his astonishment, and finally said:

"Not a lady——"

"Yes, sir. A real lady, sir," she affirmed. "And she said, 'Mr. Robin Smith.' Couldn't be any mistake about it, sir. She came in a car, all swanky-like, sir."

Robin Smith rose impetuously from his chair and hurried to the window, which looked out on Mecklenburgh Square. With its noble old trees now in the full bloom of June, it was one of the survivals of old London at its best. He loved the square, with its handsome Regency houses which had seen better days, and for him the whole neighborhood had the pleasurable associations of a recent historical past. There, just beyond the trees, invisible because of the foliage, was the squat, stately structure of the Foundling Home, with its fine Hogarths, in whose chapel the composer Handel gave the first rendering of a new composition, and where from the immemorial children have sung Christmas carols to the delight of visitors from far and wide. And just around the corner, in Doughty street, Charles Dickens had lived and worked.

But it was not the square that interested the poet at this moment. Indeed, he looked straight down, and saw a long, luxurious car; a Rolls-Royce, surely, he said to himself. At the wheel he discerned the seated, motionless figure of just such a well-groomed chauffeur as befitted the dignity of such a car. But all he could see of its owner was the rim of a hat, a filmy, flowery creation, more than half hidden within the open broad doorway of the house.

"Heavens! Could it really be for me?" he murmured.

But this, he realized, was no time for reflection. It was rude to keep a lady, and such a lady, waiting. His first impulse, then, was to run down; and, indeed, he was already on the landing when he suddenly paused and reconsidered. A hard expression came into his gentle eyes as he turned to the maid and said:

"Mary, ask the lady to come up here."

"In here, sir?" It was Mary's turn to hesitate. Her attitude plainly said: "How can you ask a lady who has come in such a car, up three flights of stairs and into such a room?"

As if reading her thoughts, he turned on the servant with unaccustomed brusqueness.

"Do as I say, Mary. Ask the lady to come up here. She'll come, if she really wants to see me!"

Mary gave Robin Smith a look as if she thought him out of his mind, and obediently ran down stairs to impart the poet's message.

As for Robin Smith, he seated himself in one of his two chairs and smiled with enigmatic satisfaction while awaiting his visitor. It was nice, for a change, having lady visitors come to seek him instead of running after them as he had been doing in the past. After all, he was getting more into the limelight as one of England's really good poets, and there was no reason at all why elegant ladies, with plenty of time on their hands, shouldn't seek him out. No reason at all. His eyes shone with a naive pride. He might have been one of the great princes of commerce, with men and women at his beck and call, instead of a poor poet who, with the help of art patrons, managed to eke out a bare living. Ho, he though, as he turned to a manuscript and pretended to read it, it made a fine sound to hear the music of dainty feminine footfalls on the stairs coming toward him and for him; it was a delicious sensation to take in the ascending faint aroma of a delicate perfume. It was an idea for a poem. Yes, as soon as the lady left he would certainly write a poem about it. And because the lady was unexpected and he didn't even know who she was, the poem should be all the better for it. To him the unexpected was what made life worth living. And this visit of an elegant lady was decidedly unexpected.

His fanciful ruminations were cut short by the appearance of the lady herself. Indeed, he was taken aback to find she was none other than Lady Dorothy Alston, who had been one of the first to take an interest in his work, and who had taken no little trouble to introduce him to "the people that really mattered." Lady Dorothy knew everybody worth knowing, and she saw to it that they met at her house in town; wherefore, her teas were celebrated, and to be invited to them was a mark of honor which none failed to appreciate. Soldiers, statesmen, artists, the prime minister himself, graced these teas.

Consequently, when he was first asked by Lady Dorothy to tea, Robin Smith suddenly became aware that he had "arrived." And in the last months he had become a frequent visitor. It made his work known among a small but very select circle, and for this he was grateful. But so far he had not yet been asked to a week-end in her exquisite country house; this was an exclusive honor reserved for the few. To be frank, the thought that he had not been asked rankled in the breast of Robin Smith who, rightly or wrongly, nurtured a secret pride, and disliked playing second fiddle to anybody.

Nevertheless, being but human, the poet melted at the sight of Lady Dorothy, and he suddenly felt contrite because he had subjected her to the indignity of climbing three flights of stairs. She was puffing and out of breath as he directed her to his other chair. But she was smiling and did not appear at all offended, which made him sorrier still. In her late forties, she was tall and looked younger than her years; and she was handsome in her summery clothes. The white dress, partially concealed by a black satin wrap which toned in with the wide-brimmed black hat trimmed with flowers, suited her. Her large, brown, intelligent eyes surveyed the tiny, book-lined room, with its narrow sleeping cot in the corner transformed into a lounge by day, and she beamed on the young man.

"What a darling room!" she cried. "The very room for producing masterpieces, I'm sure! It's nice of you to let me come up. And what lovely trees outside. They must be an inspiration to you."

"I chose the room because of the trees," he mumbled, not yet fully recovered from his abashment. "I am sorry if I may have seemed rude in not coming down, but I was composing a poem and didn't want to lose my thought," he began to explain. He was lying, but in the circumstances thought it would be better to lie than hurt her feelings.

"Don't apologize!" she exclaimed. "It is for me to apologize for having intruded. But I had no other way of reaching you quickly."

"Could it really be for me?"

At these words Robin Smith nervously tapped his knee with his tapering, sensuous fingers, and the motion attracted Lady Dorothy's eyes to the shiny surface of the worn trousers. He waited expectantly, wondering what this great lody could want of him at such short notice.

"You see," went on Lady Dorothy, smiling, "I must have a poet to round out my week-end party at Alston Manor. You've never been there, I believe. And you'll simply love it at this time of the year. The roses are perfect!"

"Yes, I know. Your rose garden is famous." He smiled with obvious pleasure. And yet Robin Smith's manner was hesitant. He was, in fact, wondering whether Lady Dorothy had tried to get some other poet who, after accepting, had at the last moment "let her down." His pride would not allow him to be an alternative. There was a hint of sulkiness in his mood, and a faint shadow passed across his face which did not escape his visitor.

"I haven't given you much notice, of course," she hastened to say, mistaking the nature of his doubts. "There's a good train from Victoria at 3, which should land you at Alston Manor at 4:15. Do come!" Then, suddenly, another thought struck her. The poet was poor. Perhaps he could not afford the fare, and an inspiration came to her. "I'll tell you what I'll do," she said. "I'll call for you in my car at 2:30, and we'll make the journey together. It will be pleasanter for me than driving down there alone. What do you say?"

The proposal mollified Robin Smith and his expression softened. She really appeared to want him.

"I'll come," he said, simply. Then he added, as an afterthought, "and who'll be there, Lady Dorothy?"

"Oh, you're worrying about dress clothes!" she exclaimed, with a most disarming smile. "Don't think that matters; one may dress or not, as one likes, at Alston Manor."

"It wasn't that," protested Robin Smith. A deep red flush which spread from neck to face loudly belied his words, "I was merely interested."

Lady Dorothy, regretting his embarrassment, hastened to cover up the awkward moment by rapidly enumerating her distinguished guests. She counted them off on her slender gloved fingers.

"There will be Gwen, of course. You know Lady Gwendolen Winston?"

"Rather!" thought Robin, with a sudden intake of breath.

"Her brother will be there, too," continued Lady Dorothy. "Lord Winston. He's just returned from a year in Canada, so it will be a sort of reunion tonight."

Robin's eyes were shining with an unwonted brilliance, Lady Dorothy thought to herself, and was accordingly pleased to think that an invitation from her should so gratify the man who was certainly the coming poet of England.

"Donald Flint will be there, too," Lady Dorothy announced with appropriate pride, for Donald Flint was a name at present to conjure with. A "Napoleon of Finance," the newspapers called him; he had sprung into eminence only since the war. There were rumors that he was about to receive a knighthood; however that might be, he certainly was one of the wealthiest unmarried men of her acquaintance, and considered an asset by all smart hostesses. "You've heard of him, I'm sure; and Mr. Armstrong, you know—Bruce Armstrong, the explorer; and Muriel Haddon, the charming violinist . . ."

"Oh, I say," interrupted Robin, whimsically. "Whatever do you need of me at such a party?"

"Silly!" Lady Dorothy brushed aside his protest. "You'll be the only poet there. And what's a party without a poet?"

"A success!" laughed Robin, dryly.

Lady Dorothy refused to notice this attempt at sarcasm and continued listing her guests, one against each of her gloved fingers.

"Then there will be Prince Pozolevsky, an own cousin to the czar. . . ."

"What a lot of cousins the old boy must have had!" interrupted Robin, flippantly, intending to be rude. The list of guests was beginning to gnaw at his pride. If it hadn't been for one reason, he'd have thrown up the invitation, after all.

Lady Dorothy bit her lip. Poets were temperamental and it had to be allowed for, she knew, but she found it extremely difficult, sometimes.

"Sir George and Lady Opie will be the only other guests," she continued coolly. "I believe you know Lady Opie rather well?"

"Yes, she was very kind to me in Paris in the old days before she married." Robin was glad to know that an old friend would be among these famous personages, but not as glad as he was to know that Lady Gwendolen was to be there. But that was another matter.

Lady Dorothy had risen and was gazing reflectively out upon the old square. Robin stood uncomfortably waiting for her to speak. He felt that he had been unnecessarily rude, and he was a little sorry. After all, Lady Dorothy was a good sort and she had been thoroughly decent to him; he had no business to be disagreeable when he was temporarily her host. It was that old pride of his again. It was for ever standing in his way, getting him into constant scrapes.

"Then it's settled," said Lady Dorothy, as she turned to go. "I shall call for you with my car at 2:20. And, by the by," she added, pausing in the doorway, "do bring that lovely poem with you. I mean the one you read at tea the other day."

"That one," replied Robin Smith, beamingly. "I don't think much of that one now. I've written a better one since!" And he began to rummage among his papers for the new poem.

"Bring both along. I must hurry now!" said Lady Dorothy. "Good-by!" And before he could collect himself he heard the downward patter of her feet on the stairs.

Lady Dorothy's visit left Robin Smith in an excited state of mind. He was both pleased and displeased. And, curiously enough, pleasure and displeasure came from the same source. His presence was desired, his celebrity acknowledged: This fact fed his pride. But he had nothing whatsoever in common with the personages he was asked to meet—absolutely nothing!—they would listen politely to his verses and as politely praise them; as for understanding them, that was really too much to expect. Inwardly, they would regard him as an intruder, a nobody, and once his back was turned they would discuss him contemptuously, or at best, with badinage and good natured laughs. If they were only fellow writers and poets! Why, then, had he accepted?

Frankly, he had to admit to himself that he couldn't help but accept. It was a part of a poet's life nowadays. Patronage and that sort of thing helped a man to success. One had to live, after all. Living in an attic was bad enough. As for dying in one—it wasn't done any more. It wasn't in the fashion at all. And he, Robin Smith, wanted to live. By gad, he would live, too! He had a right to live as well as any one.

Besides—there was always that "besides!" He had a deep, insatiable curiosity as to how the other half of the world lived. Especially the more opulent half. There was a sense of adventure in it, and he craved adventure with his whole soul's will. He was as good as anybody, and, of course, he would go, and shame them all and the devil.

Who were they, after all?

There was Donald Flint. A financier, who had got rich all of a sudden, since the war. Where did he get his money? By profiteering, probably. What was money, anyhow? Money was an accident. Riches were acquired or thrust upon one. But he, Robin Smith, was a poet. Born a poet, too. What had he to fear of Donald Flint? Nothing.

Bruce Armstrong was quite another matter. He was an intrepid man who explored the jungles of Africa, killed lions and tigers, wild men, too, maybe. Armstrong, if not a poet, would at least prove interesting. Armstrong would be a man to meet. He ought to prove a man on the right side of the ledger.

Except for a Russian prince and the elderly husband of Andree Opie there would be only women. Robin liked women. He especially liked one of the women who was sure to be there. From the first time his pale-gray eyes had rested on the vivid, untouched beauty of Lady Gwendolen Winston he had been her slave. Not that she knew it. Not for worlds would he have her suspect it! She would probably laugh, that delightfully soft, willful laugh of hers, and with a "Cheerio" flung over her shoulder forget all about him in an excited discussion of the latest tennis match.

Robin slouched moodily into his customary chair. Before his eyes arose the image of Lady Gwendolen as plainly as if she were standing there in person; the small, exquisitely shaped head with its closely cropped black hair accentuating the beauty of the lines of the rather long neck; the boyish, slim figure, attired in the clinging white silk jumper dress she usually wore, the skirt scarcely reaching her knees, revealing shapely legs and ankles; the black eyes under haughty brows, the vivid coloring of the cheeks which came and went so quickly, the yielding mouth contradicted by the firm, determined chin. She was said to look very much like her brother, who was ten years older. Robin did not look forward to meeting this brother; from what he had heard, the Earl of Winston possessed all the virtue of face and figure which he lacked . . . and Lady Gwendolen adored him. Not reassuring for Robin!

He shook himself and smiled ruefully at the thought. Well, he would go through with it. Whatever came of pain or pleasure, it would be worth it just to be for three days in the same house with this wonderful girl! With an unseeing look in his gray eyes he began methodically to pack his bag.

He surely would not have been so eager had he the slightest inkling of what was to befall him before the end of that day.

Fall Season To See Much Entertaining

Capital Hostesses Plan Jolly Round of Fetes This Autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. de Wichfeld Plan Visit to Washington.

Among the continentals who will visit in Washington for a few weeks during the season are Mr. and Mrs. Axel de Wichfeld, who are just now at Dunkeld House, in Dunkeld, Scotland, for the shooting. Mrs. de Wichfeld formerly was Mrs. Clarence Moore, whose mansion on Massachusetts avenue is now occupied by the Canadian Legation.

Contrary to their custom, Mr. and Mrs. de Wichfeld did not take Blair Atholl, the ancestral home of the Duke of Atholl, where they generally entertain great parties of friends during the grouse hunting. Occupying Dunkeld House, however, the Wichfelds were hosts to friends going up for the season. They pass much of their time in Paris.

Miss Dorothy Erwin Cox Saturday became the bride of Mr. Carleton W. Meyer, the son of Interstate Commerce Commissioner Balthasar H. Meyer and Mrs. Meyer. Miss Cox is the daughter of Mrs. John R. Cox, of Philadelphia and formerly of Washington.

The ceremony was performed at the Unitarian Church by the rector of the church, the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, at 11:30 o'clock. Before the ceremony the sister of the bridegroom, Miss Sylvia Meyer, gave a program of harp numbers.

Mr. John Rudolph Cox, brother of the bride, gave her in marriage, and she was attended by Mrs. Dorothy Plummer, of Philadelphia.

A reception for the members of the immediate family was held at the home of the bridegroom.

After a honeymoon spent at Brule, Wis., the young couple will go to Philadelphia to make their home.

More than 50,000,000 miles were traveled last year in about 15,000,000 hours by automobiles carrying United States mail.

EXTRA GUARD GIVEN TO LINGLE WITNESS

Fellow Prisoners Menacing on Learning He Balked Jail Delivery.

PISTOL AND SAWS TAKEN

Chicago, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Fearing he would be slain by aroused prisoners, officials today provided a special guard and an isolated cell for Frank H. Bell, who Friday implicated two companions in the murder of Alfred Lingle. At the same time instructions were issued to prepare his food separately and give it careful supervision as a precaution against poisoning.

Numerous threats against Bell's life have been made since the purported Lingle confession, officials said, and feeling against him among the 1,500 prisoners reached a high pitch today when it was learned he had betrayed William Lenhardt, Cleveland killer, under sentence of death, in an attempted jail break last night.

Bell thwarted Lenhardt's escape by warning Warden David Moneypenny and Coroner Bundesen that the prisoner had a revolver and hacksaws concealed in his cell. Besides the gun and saws, officials found the killer had sawed a square out of his cell door and had sealed it up again with paste, awaiting time for delivery.

Bell said Lenhardt had planned to knock a guard in the head with the pistol, crawl through the hole he had sawed in his cell and use the guard's keys in freeing Bell so that both could escape. But a serial story entitled "Put On the Spot," in a newspaper that had been placed in Bell's cell, ostensibly by another prisoner, thwarted the break. Across the story was scrawled: "You're next."

Bell, heeding the warning, decided he was safer inside the jail than out. He feared assassination for naming as participants in the Lingle slaying Joe Traum, Indiana gangster, now in the Leavenworth Federal prison, and Richard Sullivan, a county jail prisoner.

Traum and Sullivan, Bell had told police recently, employed him to drive their automobile on the day of the Lingle slaying. He said he drove the pair to Michigan avenue and Randolph street, where they met a "blond man" who fired the shot that killed the reporter.

Mrs. Julia Glovka, Lenhardt's mother, who, police were informed, supplied the pistol and cartridges smuggled into the prisoner's cell, was arrested today in Cleveland charged with complicity in her son's attempted jail break.

Here you are Major

We know just how you feel, Major—how every man feels about manicuring an old-fashioned furnace. And we sympathize.

We do more than sympathize. We offer you the solution to your problem. And you won't have to get a kindly millionaire to finance you either.

Automatic Gas Heat will banish forever all furnace cares. Each year your gas company sends its heating engineers to overhaul your Automatic Gas Heating Plant at no cost to you. (There's seldom anything to do.)

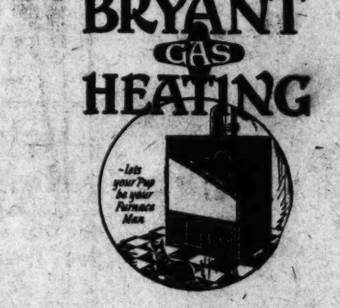
One match is your winter's kindling. Our gas holders are your fuel bin. There are never any ashes with Automatic Gas Heat, and incidentally, Major, fewer carpets to beat, because—gas is clean.

Furnace tending now becomes a matter of getting out the old carpet slippers and the comfortable armchair for an evening's snooze or gossip. The temperature is ever constant, always at the desired heat, automatically controlled by a thermostat on the wall.

Hundreds, it will soon be thousands, are now installing Automatic Gas Heat, which a few years ago was an undreamed-of luxury. The new low gas rates have put this great home convenience within the reach of the average man. Our advice to you, Major, and to the Madam, is to call National 8280, the House Heating Department. They will be glad to give you an accurate estimate of what Automatic Gas Heat will cost.

BRYANT GAS HEATING

For steam, vapor, hot water and warm air systems in new and old residences, large and small.



If your present heating plant is in good condition, it can be converted into a gas-burning boiler. Janitrol can be quickly installed for $175.

CANAL FIRM CLAIMS DELAY PARK PLANS

Chesapeake & Ohio Co. Cites Charter Rights in Proceedings.

ROCK CREEK INVOLVED

Efforts of the government to condemn considerable property for improvement and extension of the Potomac and Rock Creek Park developments may be halted or stayed indefinitely by reason of the fact that the property of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal Co. is involved.

The canal company, which incidentally constructed the second artificial water link in the United States, raises the question that its property can not be disturbed or subtracted from without the consent of the States of Virginia and Maryland.

On July 10 the Government, United States Attorney Leo A. Rover and Special Assistant to the Attorney General Henry H. Glassie, began proceedings by which it seeks to annex a huge acreage under the act of Congress which permits acquisition of land for the improvement of Rock Creek and Potomac Parks and to prevent pollution of the stream. More than 200 property owners were named as defendants, and while many of them have attacked the proposal, none has offered a better reason than the canal company.

In its answer, filed through Attorneys Hamilton & Hamilton, the canal company admits that Congress passed an act giving the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway Commission right to acquire land by condemnation, but it declares that the act in no way affects it.

In fact, the company asserts that "under its charter and by virtue of authority conferred upon it by various acts of the Legislatures of the States of Virginia and Maryland, which were approved and ratified by "acts of Congress," it was given certain rights which can not be abrogated by any act of Congress unless Virginia and Maryland agree.

The company asserts "the right to construct its basin, mole, and other properties, and the acquisition of of land to receive the back waters caused by the necessary dams to raise the level of Rock Creek, and the right to acquire all said property by said Canal Company 'were vested in it' by purchase, condemnation proceedings, or by virtue of said various legislative amendments." It sets out that "the acquisition of lands and the erection of the company's works thereon" were by these acts and subsequent acts abundantly ratified.

Continuing the company avers that "the said acts of the legislatures of the States of Virginia and Maryland and of the Congress of the United States incorporating said Canal Company, and containing its charter, constitute a contract or compact between said States and the United States, which can not be abrogated, impaired or subtracted from by any act of the United States or by any Acts of Congress . . . without the consents of the States of Virginia and Maryland."

The company's property which is involved, is between Virginia avenue northwest and Twenty-eighth street.

Dr. Eckener Wires Britsh Sympathy

Graf Zeppelin Commander Says Helium May Have Averted Deaths.

Leipsic, Bavaria, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Dr. Hugo Eckener and the officers and crew of the Graf Zeppelin, which is here today on a flight to Vienna, telegraphed to Prime Minister McDonald: "Please accept the heartfelt sympathy of comrades in arms."

Dr. Eckener told interviewers that although the actual cause of the disaster was not yet known, he was convinced it would not have assumed such ghastly proportions if the British airship had used helium instead of hydrogen.

He called attention to frequent statements of his that a fairly safe transoceanic airship service would be possible only if helium and not hydrogen were employed as a lifting gas.

TRIAL ON KIDNAPING CHARGE WILL BE SET

Mary Frances McClenny's Case to Come Up Today in Richmond.

AUTHORITIES HOLD TRIO

Richmond, Va., Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Court procedure in the Mary Frances McClenny case will be started tomorrow in Henrico County Circuit Court, when Judge Gunn is scheduled to set the trials of three Richmond men indicted in connection with the disappearance of the 20-year-old girl last July.

Harry Dickinson, the girl's companion when she was found July 12 in Waynesboro, is charged with "feloniously, unlawfully, and illegally did take and secrete Mary Frances McClenny, a child under the age of 21 years, from her father, D. C. McClenny, person having lawful charge of her, without first obtaining his permission," and "unlawfully did take and transport Mary Frances McClenny, a female person, to Waynesboro, Va., for immoral purposes, with the knowledge that the said taking and transporting of Mary Frances McClenny was for immoral purposes."

N. H. Dickinson and John S. Leadbetter, filling station operator, associates of Dickinson, face charges that they "unlawfully, feloniously and illegally did aid and abet the unlawful, felonious and illegal taking and secreting of Mary Frances McClenny, a child under the age of 21, from her father, D. C. McClenny, the person having lawful charge of her, without first obtaining his permission."

The cases were expected to be set tomorrow, and the trials to begin later in the week.

CATHOLICS UNVEIL MEMORIAL CRUCIFIX

3,000 Witness Rites Marking First Settlement of Church in State.

NOTABLES ARE PRESENT

Special to The Washington Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 5.—Marked by the ritualistic ceremony of the Catholic Church, the huge bronze crucifix commemorating the first Catholic settlement in Virginia was unveiled this afternoon in the presence of a crowd of 3,000 persons at Aquia, on the Richmond-Washington highway, 14 miles north of here. The crucifix, rising 30 feet in height and weighing nine tons, is intended primarily to mark the first Catholic settlement in Virginia, but it also will serve as an arresting symbol of Christianity to the 10,000,000 or more persons who annually pass over the highway near which it stands.

Ceremonies were started in the old Brent Cemetery, where lie many members of the pioneer Catholic families. After a procession of half a mile to the crucifix, headed by the United States Marine Band from Quantico, playing "Onward, Christian Soldiers," the memorial was unveiled by Miss Mary Archer, of Richmond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Archer.

The Rev. E. T. O'Connell, pastor of St. Paul's Church, Richmond, was the principal speaker, and the presentation of the memorial on the part of the Catholic Women's Club, of Richmond, was made by the Rev. Leo A. Gill, chaplain of the organization. The acceptance was made by the Right Rev. Andrew J. Brennan, Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Virginia. With Gov. John Garland Pollard as a member of the official party, Bishop Brennan administered the blessing of the memorial after the unveiling.

The crucifix was made possible through efforts of the Catholic Women's Club, of Richmond, and was designed and created by George L. Lober, a young Danish sculptor, living in New York. The figure of Christ on the Aquia memorial, which is of heroic proportion, being 9 feet high, varies somewhat from the conventional portrayal. It is more rugged, with heavier hands and feet, and the appearance of more strength than is ordinarily seen.

Since erection of the crucifix was begun threatening letters have been received bearing alleged signature of the Ku Klux Klan, saying that the monument would be destroyed.

Rainmaker in Middleburg Section Fails to Produce

With Only Day or Two Left to Cause Precipitation and Collect $3,000, Scientist Now Wants Government Aid.

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Oct. 5.—"Dr." G. A. I. M. Sykes, the New York rainmaker extraordinary, having failed with his electro-magnetic apparatus and dynamite reverberations to produce rain for the rich New Yorkers and others whose fox chase programs have been held up in the Middleburg section, because it continues too dry for hounds to take the scent, now wants the United States Government to help him compel the rain to fall.

"Dr." Sykes has endeavored with little or no success, it was learned today, to interest a number of influential Virginians in his rain-making efforts in the fox chase country and go with him to Washington and bring pressure to bear upon officials of the War Department to send some large artillery to Loudoun and Fauquier Counties, where the hounds are yelping for the chase. It is his plan to have the Government bring big guns into action against the obstinate clouds, which he says appear to be laden with rain but fail to precipitate.

Sykes will get $3,000 if he brings rain in a day or two, and he says it must come down by hook or crook. However, if no rain falls this week as the result of his efforts he is to get only $1,000. Sykes came into prominence recently in his association with the Westchester Racing Association in New York State, where he collected $8,000 for keeping rain off the race track. After the races he tried to bring rain without remuneration, but failed. The day he kept the track dry there was a heavy downpour in the metropolitan area, but by some freak the track was not dampened.

Man Stealing Train Ride Narrowly Misses Death

An effort to ride the "blind" of a moving train in Potomac yards early yesterday morning nearly cost the life of Jack Rose White, 23 years old, of Beavertown, Mich., when he slipped and fell beside the wheels.

Suffering from cuts and bruises, the man was treated at the Union Station dispensary and sent to Gallinger Hospital in police custody. His condition is not serious.

Moscow Officials Find Petty Graft in Shops

Moscow, Oct. 4 (A.P.).—Fighting petty graft in government shops is one of the bothersome problems of the Soviet government. Officials recently arrested a number of clerks and accused them of double dealings in the commodity tickets issued by cooperatives to members, and enabling the latter to buy bread, shoes and clothing at government stores.

Inspectors found that the clerks, instead of destroying the coupons presented over the counter, sold them to speculators, who used them for purchases at government prices and then resold the goods in the private markets at double or even treble the government prices.

GIRL DIES, TWO HURT AS VEHICLES CRASH

Motorcycle Bearing Trio Collides With Car in Harrisonburg.

YOUTHS WERE ON VISIT

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 5.—Miss Mabelle Campbell, 18, daughter of J. M. Campbell, Bedford, Va., was instantly killed and her two cousins, Carl and Opal Grant, of Thaxton, Va., were seriously injured here this afternoon when their motorcycle collided with an automobile on South High street in front of the Harrisonburg High School. All three were astride the motorcycle.

Opal Grant, 19, is in the hospital with a fractured jaw, probable concussion of the brain and a fractured arm. Carl Grant, 23, suffered a fractured wrist and severe lacerations of the face. Opal had not regained consciousness tonight.

Robert Gaines, of Harrisonburg, driver of the automobile, said the motorcycle in turning into South High street ran directly into the side of his car. No inquest has been held.

The Grant brothers were here visiting their cousin, who has been living with friends here and attending school.

Troy Campbell, 20, and Thelma Campbell, 23, brother and sister of the dead girl, were on another motorcycle in front of the other machine and did not know of the accident until they heard the crash from some distance away. The body of Miss Campbell will be taken to Bedford tomorrow.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

In many businesses

The Ford Truck earns a place

IN ALMOST every business where hauling plays a part, the Ford truck is giving faithful transportation at an unusually low cost. Because of its strength, reliability, long life, safety and excellent service, its low first cost makes it a remarkable value. This fact becomes more evident through the economy of the truck in daily work.

One of the most important factors contributing to its reliability and low cost of operation is the rugged simplicity of the operating mechanism. The ignition, lubrication, cooling and fuel systems are excellent examples of this feature.

Strength and simplicity of the parts of the Ford truck materially reduce the cost of maintenance, and correspondingly increase its reliability for day in and day out service.

Ford trucks are so designed that they can be economically adapted to a large number of businesses. It is possible to procure the Ford truck with a wide variety of bodies, in two different chassis lengths, with single or dual wheels, with open or closed cabs, and with high or low rear axle gear ratios.

For every business need there is a Ford haulage unit of high value that is low in first cost and low in cost of operation.

By CONNIE(WESTBROOK PEGLER) STREET.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5.—Fans, have you ever known what it was to absolutely make up your mind that you are determined to do something and not take "no" for an answer, come what may? That is the way the boys are tonight, now that the world series is tied into a veritable stalemate, with two contests won apiece for each contender for the most highly treasured bauble within the realm of the premier American sport.

It is just the same tonight as it would be if we were just starting the series now for two games out of three instead of four games out of seven, and one thing I will say to you, straight from the shoulder, is that I think deep down in my heart, our boys are determined to go in there with plenty of the old pepper, as you call it, and win for the great loyal body of fans. You deserve it and we are going to try our hardest and give it to you, and there you have the secret of the way we feel about the situation in the most crucial crisis of our career in the national game.

From now on it will be nip and tuck, and the devil take the hindmost, each club for itself, with no excuses for the defeated aggregation.

World Series Not Ordinary Games.

I am trying to not give any impression that we think these world series games are merely ordinary ball games. Sometimes I see where the thoughtless element make statements to this effect but I want you to know right here and now, folks, that when you are in a world series every nerve is tightened up like a fighting cock and victory is the greatest ambition of each and every one concerned. So how any one can calmly state that the world series is just another series is beyond the understanding of any true-blooded American with the glorious traditions of the classic uppermost in their heart at this time.

In writing up my articles exclusively for The Washington Post to give the fans of Washington the complete, secret inside dope on the classic, I have tried hard to be fair to our opponents in all respect wherever I could, but I do not think any one who considers the correct facts can have any doubt which is the better club. You take for instance, our pitching, and compare it with their pitching and you are bound to notice that, except for some unfortunate breaks, there was practically no comparison. The umpiring, I must say, has not been as perfect as I would like to see it in an important classic of this kind, but I do not intend to further discuss that because I never want to let it be said that I could not take the breaks just as they come without running around complaining about the umpires.

Players Play Better in Light Of Own Parks.

Another thing, however, that may interest the dyed-in-the-wool faithful fans is that the light is different in some parks than in others and if you are accustomed to the light in your home park, you may have trouble adjusting your eyes to a different kind of light somewhere else. Of course, there is nothing any deader than yesterday's ball game, by which I mean today's ball game after it has been played, but sometimes it will give the fans an intimate understanding of just what strategy is if they can sit beside the manager on the bench as the tide of battle flames around him with kaleidoscopic suddenness and victory sits on the lap of the gods.

In today's game, there were several times when the players had to signal to Cy Rigler, the umpire, to move to one side or the other as he was blocking the light standing out near second base. Now this may seem a small thing, but when an umpire is so big that he blots out the light of Old Sol, making it necessary for the players to bat in almost pitch darkness, it seems to me that National League ought to make some other arrangements in regard to the umpiring. I just mention these facts because they are facts which I think the fans ought to know in fairness to the public, but not to make any excuses. In fact, I think any team that fights such a fighting, stellar bunch of determined athletes as those to a standstill in four games, is deserving of a world of credit, for they are a mighty good ball club, fans, despite my contention that we are distinctly superior, anyway you look at it in a fair light.

Should Join Army to Hear Band Music.

Well, to lok on the lighter side of things, I have been very much amused in a subtle way about the criticism with regards to there not being any band in the Philadelphia park. Now, what I have always said is that music is music and baseball is baseball, and if people must have band music they ought to join the Army or go to the theater, but if it is baseball they have uppermost in their hearts, then it doesn't make any difference whether these is a 25-piece band, or not even a jewsharp. Personally, I have never

45,000 Watch Cubs Beat Chisox

Lyons Is Outlasted by Malone in Fifth Encounter.

National Leaguers in Front by Game in City Series.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Pat Malone managed to outlast Ted Lyons and four other White Sox pitchers today to give the Cubs a 6-to-4 victory in the fifth game of the city series and a one-game edge in the set.

The prospect of seeing Malone and Lyons stage another duel attracted a record series attendance of 45,104 spectators who paid $52,062.50. Lyons was batted out of the box in the fifth inning and was replaced by Braxton, Moore, Henry and Faber in turn.

Malone Improves Toward The Finish.

Malone was wild and was in difficulty most of the way, but he improved toward the finish, and in the last three innings fanned five men. He permitted 12 hits, three of which were made by Smead Jolley, and walked one.

Malone's most serious loss of control came in the sixth inning during a White Sox rally when he cut loose with a fast ball, striking Johnny Watwood, Sox center fielder, on the head and knocking him unconscious. Watwood was carried from the field after receiving emergency attention. He was reported to have been only slightly injured, but probably will not be able to play tomorrow.

The Cubs got to Lyons in the first inning when two doubles and a pair of singles produced two runs. They picked up another in the second and went into the fifth with a 3-to-0 lead. The Sox rallied for two runs, but Rogers Hornsby's team blasted Lyons out in their half of the inning.

Wilson's First Series Homer Is Feature.

The feature blow of the fifth was Hack Wilson's first homer of the series, with Cuyler on ahead of him. The Sox got their last pair in the sixth, and were almost helpless thereafter. Cuyler got a double and two singles, while Hartnett kicked in with a brace of doubles and a single.

The sixth game will be played tomorrow at Comiskey Park, the White Sox battle ground.

Equipoise Seen Choice To Win Ky. Feature

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 4.—Harry Payne Whitney's Equipoise seems destined to rule favorite for the $35,000 Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes, which will be decided on the closing day of the present Churchill Downs meeting, Thursday, October 16. The smashing victory of the Whitney colt in the Eastern Shore Handicap left little doubt as to his right to the post of honor in Kentucky's big juvenile race.

Equipoise will have plenty of opposition, however, as among the eligibles are Gifford A. Cochran's Epithet, R. W. Collins' Don Leon, which ran second in the Eastern Shore, Gallaher & Combs' Back Log, Audley Farm's Knight's Call, E. R. Bradley's Baba Kenny, B'ar Hunter and Boys Howdy, J. N. Camden's Frigate Bird, W. R. Coe's Polydorus, Greentree Stable's Surf Board and Twenty Grand, Hamburg Place's Bosafabo, Walter J. Salmon's Ladder and others of the same caliber.

It is considered probable that the Harry Payne Whitney stable will have more than one starter as an entry, as in addition to Equipoise both Magnifico and Pennate are eligible.

Players to Split $323,865; Winner's Share Is $5,038

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—The 1930 world's series players' pool derived from a major portion of the gate receipts for the first four games only, amounts to $323,865.50. It is the smallest in eight years and nearly $100,000 short of the high mark of $419,736.60, set in 1928, for the series between the Yankees and Cardinals.

$5,038 for each player on the victorious side. The loser's end of the

Of the total amount of the pool, 70 per cent, or $226,705.85, goes to the contending Athletics and Cardinals on the basis of 60 per cent to the winner and 40 per cent to the loser.

Figured on the basis of a split-up on 27 shares by each team, the winners' money, $136,023.51, will mean $5.0388 for each player on the victorious side. The losers' end of the purse, $90,682.34, divided on the same basis, will mean $3,358 per full share.

The A's and Cards, therefore, in addition to the honor attached, will battle it out for the difference of approximately $1,700 per man.

The remaining 30 per cent of the total pool, or $97,159.65, will be spread among the second, third and fourth place clubs of each league.

The "split" for the other clubs figures as follows: $24,289.99 each for the Chicago Clubs and Washington Nationals, second place teams; $16,193.33 each for the New York Giants and Yankees, third place outfits, and $8,096.66 each for the Brooklyn Robins and Cleveland Indians.

Depending on how it is divided, but estimating on the same basis as the series contenders, each player on the second place clubs will receive nearly $1,000, with about $600 for each player on a third place club and around $300 for each fourth place performer.

Athletics Set Record With Trio of Assists

Sportsman Park, St. Louis, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—The Athletics set a new all-time record for world's series competition by making only three assists in today's game with the Cardinals. It was the second time in the series that this mark was broken. The Cardinals broke the only record when they were credited with only four assists in the second game, at Philadelphia, and the A's on the same day equaled the former mark of five assists.

Grove had the Cards hoisting their batting fire to such an extent today that Bishop, with two, and Boley, with one, were the only players credited with assists.

W. Va. Wesleyan in First Night Game With G. U.

Buckhannon, W. Va., Oct. 4.—West Virginia Wesleyan will get its first taste of nocturnal football Friday evening, October 11, when the Bobcats meet Georgetown University at Griffith Stadium, Washington, D. C.

Last year the Hilltoppers under the tutelage of Lou Little nosed out the Methodists in the final 5 minutes of play, scoring three touchdowns and an extra point to grab a 19-to-0 win. The destiny of the 1930 edition of the capital city team is under the guidance of Tommy Mills; a product of the Notre Dame system.

The Methodists may leave Buckhannon Wednesday evening in order that they might get at least one workout under the lights before the encounter.

Coach Ross will put the Bobcats back to work on Monday and if injuries do not again crop up after the New York University game, the West Virginians will present a stonger lineup than last year.

Slocum Named Head Of Baseball Writers

St. Louis, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—William J. Slocum, of the New York American, was today elected president of the Baseball Writers Association of America. J. Roy Stockton, of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, was named vice president and Henry P. Edwards, Chicago, manager of the service bureau of the American League, secretary and treasurer.

The board of directors consists of Stoney McLinn, Philadelphia Public Ledger; Harry Bullion, Detroit Free Press; Stuart M. Bell, Cleveland Press, and Charles Segar, New York Mirror.

Infielder Proves Star With Jess Haines in Victory.

Connie Gives Credit to Opponents After Second Loss.

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY.

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, St. Louis, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—A happy chorus of "I told you so!" boomed to the rafters of the Cardinal clubhouse today after Gabby Street's cocky warriors trooped in, single file, after shellacking the Athletics, 3 to 1, in the fourth game of the world series, thus squaring the fight.

The grizzled Street said that it would be no surprise to him now if the Cardinals annexed the next two games and the world flag.

"That's just the way I feel about the way my boys are going now," he barked. His jaws snapped together as if he were certain he knew what he was talking about.

Good Team Just Starting, Says Street.

"It's just like I told you yesterday," he said. "We're a good ball club just getting started. I never lost confidence in my boys and I'm immensely proud of them.

"No, I never thought of taking Jess Haines out of there today. He pitched a great game, and I have all the confidence in the world in him."

Street said that the turning point of the battle today was in the fourth inning, when Jimmy Dykes, the Athletic third baseman, made a poor throw to first in an effort to field Blades' sizzling grounder.

"That bad toss sent Hafey tearing home with the winning score, and it looked as if the A.'s were thrown back on their heels. I don't like to make predictions, but the way my boys are going they'll take the next two games sure."

Jesse Joseph Haines cut loose with a war whoop that made the Negro clubhouse attendant shake in his shoes as he charged through the door. He wore a tremendous grin on his face.

"Boy, hot dog and whoopee!" he shrieked.

Players Flock Around Jess Haines.

The players flocked around him, affectionately slapping him on the back.

Haines, now 37 years old, and the oldest player with the fighting Cardinals—he's been with them eleven years—was supremely happy.

"You know, I was just about ready to quit, but I was hoping that there was a great game left in me and I'm so happy that it will take an epidemic of scarlet fever to keep me out during the next two years, anyway.

"I feed 'em a lot of knuckle balls today and I think mebbe I was a little too cautious, because I really didn't want to give anything they could paste out of the lot."

Big Jesse did all his talking through a two days' growth of whiskers. He revealed that he never shaves before pitching because the burning sun and perspiration make his face sore.

The Cardinals' 24-year-old shortstop, Charlie Gelbert, was the big hero along with Haines in the Cardinal clubhouse. It was Gelbert whose slashing triple in the third inning enabled the Cardinals to tie the score and it was his single in the fourth that Grove was unable to knock down, that scored one of the two winning runs. That wasn't all. He fielded spectacularly and stopped two ominious looking Athletic rallies. Even Connie Mack went out of his way to praise Gelbert, saying that he robbed the A's of the two hits and was easily the fielding star of the game.

"That three-base hit I whacked in the third inning was the best one I ever cracked," Gelbert spoke up. "The pitch was a fast one, inside."

Gelbert Makes Triple For His "Girl."

Gelbert really meant that smash for a charming little girl back in Chambersburg, Ohio, whom he is to marry October 16. They became sweethearts while he was attending college at Lebanon Valley, Pa. Gelbert's dad, all-American football end while at Pennsylvania, in 1904-05-06, was in the stands joyously to cheer his son's sparkling performance at bat and afield.

Connie Mack, reviewing the second straight defeat of his Athletics, said that it was difficult to smile after two setbacks in a row, but added that the Cardinals deserved to win and that he had no criticism to make of the Athletics' mistakes.

"Errors," the kindly old leader of Athletics Held Hitless After Third by Veteran.

Gelbert Stars Afield, at Bat in Cards' Second Win.

By DICK WILLIAMS.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The farther this series goes, the better it gets. They played a ball game out here today that warmed the cockles of the most pessemistic man's heart. The Cardinals won it and the bright sun of a new birth shone through the blanket of gray that hung over Sportsman's Park all day and glowed on the beaming pans of 40,000 groggy St. Louisans.

It was the best contest thus far played in the series. The score was 3 to 1 and Jess Haines, a middle-aged man with a swishing fast ball, pitched the best game that has been turned in since the championship lay began in Philadelphia five days ago.

He allowed four hits and only one after the first inning. Moreover, he completely mastered the great Robert oses Grove, supposed invincible master of r. Cornelius cGillicuddy's star staff, and left r. Grove a very long and very lean and very much bowed young man, with all.

Pitcher Haines had just one bad inning, the first. In that bracket, it appeared that he might go the way of the unhappy Mr. Flint Them, celebrated ghost drinker and foremost citizen of the courthouse, South Carolina.

Gloom Envelopes Country.

The cA's got three hits and scored one run in this inning and the gloom that enveloped this section of the country could not have been sliced with a corn knife, such as Mr Haines used when he was whacking down fodder up in Illinois.

After that the A's were completely subdued and tractable save for an outburst by Fielder Al Simmons in the third. Mr. Simmons whacked a single to shortstop with a man out, but it was rather a meager single at best and called for no further effort than a double play on the second ball pitched to the muscular James Foxx, first baseman for Mr. Mack.

It was a caution the way these St. Louisans bogged down in that first inning and then came bouncing back in the third, when the Cardinals tied the score after it seemed that they never would get around to banging Mr. Grove substantially.

There had been signs of a Cardinal outburst when Jimmy Wilson, the first hitter, whacked a very serious drive to right field only to have it gobbled up by Bing Miller, but the insurrection actually didn't materialize until young Charley Gelbert, the limber young man who plays shortstop for the home folks, came up.

Shortstop Gelbert took one strike, then a ball, and then shot a line drive inside first bast. It bounced once, struck the temporary stand in right field, hopped past Fielder Miller and caromed off the right field will, with Mr. Miller in whooping pursuit and Fielder Haas galloping over from center field with reinforcements.

Gelbert Slides Into Third.

When Fielder Miller finally overtook and collared the ball, Shortstop Gelbert was sliding into third base, while the good Burghers, who had been lamenting a minute before, were standing up and whooping their delight in a strange, throaty babble.

Pitcher Haines came to bat then and vague memories beset the press box. It was recalled that back in 1926, Mr. Haines, while engaged in pitching a shut-out against the Yankees i nhis first game against them, had accounted for the first run of the game with a home run into the right center field corner of these same stands. Thus there was no little drama in the air.

Pitcher Haines took one strike and then swung at the second. There

THOROUGHBREDS ARRIVING FOR LAUREL MEETING

Best Horses In Training At Track

One of Many Feature Races Is $10,000 Selima Stakes.

Special to The Washington Post.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 5.—Thoroughbreds by the trainload and by buses have been arriving at the Laurel track within the past few days, with most of those which raced at the Havre de Grace meeting being vanned here yesterday, indicating that the fall Laurel meet, which starts Tuesday and calls for 23 days of racing, will be one of the best ever held at this popular track.

One of the features at the coming meet will be the Selima Stakes, which will be offered for the fifth time by the Maryland State Fair, Inc., on Saturday, October 25.

$10,000 Race in Memory Of Great Mare.

This $10,000 fixture was named in memory of the greatest mare of her time, the imported Selima, brought to Belair, Prince Georges County, Md., from England by Col. Benjamin Tasker, jr. Belair, which is now the property of William Woodward, the New York sportsman of Maryland ancestry, was the first home of the thoroughbred in this State.

By the Godolphin Arabian, Selima was foaled in 1746 and brought to Maryland in 1751, although the date of her importation is not definite. Before she was retired to the stud she was practically invincible in all her races. But her victories of nearly 200 years ago are of minor importance to her descendants.

Selima's blood flows in the veins of nearly every thoroughbred of distinction that has performed on American turf. Among others, Selima is the ancestress of the great horse Hanover, through her daughter Stella. Calypso, her great-granddaughter, is the fourth dam of Enquirer. Aerolite, dam of Spendthrift, is the male progenitor of Man o' War. Through her son, Pardner, Selima is the pedigree of American Eclipse, and her son Ariel was the sire of the sixth dam of Lexington. The Commando line and all of its descendants are traced to Selima.

Son of Selima "Man o' War" Of His Time.

Selima's best horse was Selim, foaled in 1759, and in his century was what Man o' War was in his.

That is the brief history of Selima, in whose memory the Maryland State Fair will offer a race during the coming session.

Silver Lustre, Violet Star, Bright Eyes, Yellow Flag, Allez Vite, Center Stone, Blind Lane, Batty, Dippy, Bucelette, Winfred West, Tweet Tweet, Risque, Pickmeup, Banderita, Sarah Constant, Miss Tony, Just Believe, Dark Edwina, Sunsena, Dark Magnet, Dark Ayress, Anne Arundel, Tuckahoe, Magothy, Pocomoke, Tred Avon, Brown Eagle, Shanette, Outburst, Glorious Betsy, Romanesque, Ladana, Zalia, Zaidee, Timely, Sun Parched, Green Light, Torchflare, Snowhite, Play Bird, Peach Basket, Firetop, Gun Play, Finger Tips, Occurance, Hareum Scarum, Thais, Puritan Lass, Potheen, Gosling, Pansette, Zelide, First Play, Berva and Buckup.

Walter M. Jefford's Bateau, winner of the Selima in 1927, holds the time record of 1:39 1-5.

Suburban Net Title Won by James Thomas

James Thomas, of the Bureau of Standards Club, is the newly-crowned singles champion of the Suburban Tennis League by virtue of his 2—6, 6—2, 13—11 triumph over Collin Stam, of Lakeview, in the finals of the league's annual fall net tournament played yesterday afternoon on the Wesley Heights courts.

Paired with Dean Judd, Thomas was also a member of the team which beat James McCabe and Stam, 6—4, 6—4, in a match for the 1930 doubles title of the league.

Bowie Stake Entries Will Close Saturday

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 5.—Joseph McLennan, race secretary of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association, whose 12-day fall meeting opens Monday, November 17, announced here today that the entries for the various stakes to be run at this meeting close on Saturday October 25.

The $10,000 Prince George autumn Handicap, a mile and one-sixteenth race, exclusively for 3-year-olds, is the first big race at Bowie. It is carded for Monday, November 17, and Trainer Andy Schuttinger plans to keep James Butler's Questionnaire, the year's second best 3-year-old in training for the race.

The $30,000 Southern Maryland Handicap, a mile and one-sixteenth affair for 3-year-olds and upward, is slated for Saturday, November 22. This contest will likely see Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Beau, Joseph E. Widener's Curate and John R. MacComber's Petee Wrack among the starters.

HAWSKS BOW IN DEBUT, 6 TO 0

Lansdowne Scores on 90-Yard Run After Interception.

PENNY JOHNSON, 125 pounds of grit, energy and speed, turned near defeat into victory for the Lansdowne Athletic Club Eleven of Baltimore and spoiled the debut of the Mohawks yesterday in the opening of the local independent football season in Griffith Stadium.

With his team backed up to its 12-yard line as a result of a steady Mohawk drive in the last quarter, little Johnson jumped into the air, intercepted a lateral pass thrown by Ed Abbey, the Indians' playing coach, and ran 90 yards uninterrupted to cross the home club's goal line.

Johnson, who four years ago was the anchor man on the relay team of Calvert Hall, Baltimore prep school, was on his way with the ball before the Mohawks knew that he had it. Abbey, being unable to cover up, pursued him for about 15 yards, but was blocked by one of several Lansdowne interferers who quickly fell in behind the speeding ball carrier. Bender's try for the extra point failed.

Johnson Performs Brilliantly.

Throughout the game Johnson performed brilliantly at left end for the visitors. He smashed up Mohawk interference, turning attempted end runs inside of his position, and on punts was always down the field, ready to tackle the receiver.

The Mohawks, showing many new men, including Joe Sweeney and Snail DeLabre, formerly of the Apaches, had rushed and passed their way from the Lansdowne 25-yard line for a total gain of 62 yards when Johnson came through with the feature play.

As in past years, the Indians presented a strong line with "Moose" Mosko, formerly of Georgetown University and last year with the Apaches; Herman Lombard, former Maryland star, and O'Brien, a product of St. Bonaventure College, proving outstanding. Lansdowne was held to one first down.

The first half was uneventful, both teams resorting to much kicking. Neither goal line was neared.

Hawks Reach 5-Yard Line.

The Hawks got a fine chance to score in the third quarter when a Lansdowne punt on fourth down was blocked on the 7-yard line. But a 5-yard offside penalty set the Hawks back to the 12-yard line and they were able to advance only 10 in four downs, thus surrendering the ball.

Nate Weinstock, former Western Maryland University line star, now coaching the University of Baltimore, shared honors for Lansdowne with Johnson. Weinstock's tackling and backing-up of the line caused the Hawks plenty of trouble.

Celtics Beat Northerns, 6-4, as McIntire Stars

Alexandria, Oct. 5.—Lefty McIntire, Celtics' ace, today by stellar pitching won for the Virginians the undisputed independent baseball championship of Washington and Northern Virginia, defeating the Northern A. C., 6-4, in a well-played game of baseball at Baggett's stadium.

Both McIntire and Jewitt whiffed eight batters, but they were touched for plenty of hits. The Northerns made 11 and the Celtics 10. This was the seventeenth consecutive victory for the Celtics on their home field and ended their baseball season.

TAKOMA TIGER NINE WINS CAPITAL CITY CROWN

Dixie Pigs Bow After Taking Lead

11-to-6 Victory Gives Tigers Post's Gold Baseballs.

Sixth Inning Is Decisive as Clapper Is Knocked Out.

THE Takoma Tigers won the championship of the Capital City League yesterday, and The Washington Post's gold baseballs defeating the Dixie Pigs, Prince George's County winners, by a margin of 11-6 before more than 500 fans on the Silver Spring diamond. In clinching the major baseball title in this section, the Montgomery County champions came through the intersectional play-off series without a defeat.

The Tigers were forced to make a gallant uphill fight to win yesterday. Dick Hughes, the Takoma hurler, got off to a bad start and the Tigers, unable to hit Babe Clapper, trailed by a 5—0 score in the fourth inning. However, in the fifth, the Tigers opened up a barrage on Clapper that accounted for four runs. In the meanwhile, Hughes had found his stuff and was getting the Pigs out with regularity.

Tigers Clinch Decision In Sixth.

The Tigers routed Clapper and clinched the battle in the sixth inning when they slammed the ball to all corners of the lot for seven runs. Adair went to the mound for the Prince Georges Club and ended the slaughter, but too late.

James led the Tiger attack with two triples and a single; Fitzgerald hit a homer, Hatcher got a double and triple and Hessler and Baker came through with triples.

Ben Smith Shifted By Alabama Coach

University, Ala., Oct. 5.—Ben Smith, in having been moved from full back to end on the Alabama Eleven, is following in the footsteps of his older brother, Earl. Earl played full back on the 1925 frosh eleven and on the 1926 varsity. The following year he was shifted to end, and at the close of the season was elected captain for 1928.

He played a sparkling game as captain and was hailed by sports writers as one of the outstanding wingmen of the conference. Ben played full back on the 1929 frosh team, and subbed for Tony Holm at the same position last year. Durnig spring training he was moved to end and looked so good there that he has remained at a flank since then. The Alabama coaches' judgment in making the change has been vindicated, as Ben is playing regularly on the first team. To do this he had to beat out a senior letter man. Smith is over 6 feet tall, weighs 195 pounds, and is especially adept at snagging forward passes.

MARYLAND U. AT CAROLINA SATURDAY.

Old Liners Expected to Give N. C. U. a Real Battle.

Special to The Washington Post.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Oct. 5.—The University of North Carolina football squad stays at home this week to meet an ancient rival. The Tarheels and the Old Liners of Maryland have been meeting on the gridiron at intervals over a 31-year period, and Saturday will mark their twelfth renewal of an argument that started in 1899.

North Carolina won that game in 1899, 6 to 0. There was no renewal of the series until the fall of 1920, when Maryland won a 13-to-0 victory. Each year since has brought another of the "dog fall" battles, all close and hard fought, with the margin of victory small, except for last year, when Carolina's star backs won, 43 to 0.

Tarheels Leading in Series, 7—4.

The entire series shows the Tarheels leading in games won and lost by 7 to 4. Carolina has won its three-game margin in the last three years, while Maryland has been upsetting all dope and tieing Yale's Bulldogs regularly, 13-13 last year, after taking a 43-to-0 drubbing from the Tarheels.

Carolina won by 7-6 in 1927. The Tar Heels jumped into an early lead then the heavens opened and deluged the field, and Billy Ferrell's great punting preserved the narrow margin. Ward, Magner and the other star backs led Carolina to a 26-19 triumph the next year, and these same backs ran the margin up to 48-0 last year.

Maryland won a 14-6 decision in 1926 in the face of a brilliant 93-yard touchdown return by Gus McPherson, Carolina's sprint ace. Sides and Jenkins, Carolina reserves, led the Tar Heel "mud horses" to a 16-0 victory in 1925, and before that it was a nip and tuck series of close games with the tide of victory shifting almost every year.

Hard Struggle Looked for This Week.

The approaching contest bears all the pregame earmarks of another epic struggle. Maryland showed tremendous offensive power in an opening 60-0 win over Washington College, and played its usual good game against Yale today, meaning that Maryland is well set. North Carolina has eight of the best veteran backs in the South, the same crew who led the conference in scoring last year, and a rookie line that will fight the Old Liners to the last white line.

Va. White Sox Defeat Bethesda Nine, 10 to 4

Centennials Play Tie Game With Frat Team

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Oct. 5.—Mike Goldman's Alpha Delta Omega Football Team had a close call today from losing to the Centennials, of ashington, who held them to a scoreless tie, 0 to 0.

In second quarter, Carton missed an aerial heave from Whaley over the Fraters' goal line that would have given them the verdict. The Washingtonians threatened on two other occasions, but lacked the drive to put the ball across.

A pass, Sutton to Cabell, netted the Fraters 36 yards in the fourth period and gave the Virginians a chance to score a touchdown, but the Centennials' line held and they took the ball on downs, punting out of danger.

VANDERBILT NEXT FOR V. P. I.

Poly Coach Planning Shifts for Game at Nashville.

Special to The Washington Post.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Oct. 5.—Vanderbilt's Commodores are the next opponents of Coach Orville and his Virginia Poly Eleven. The coming test at Nashville will be the first gridiron contest between V. P. I. and the Commodores, who rank among the pioneers of Dixie gridirons.

After the Vanderbilt game the Gobblers will return to Virginia soil for their annual capital city battle with William and Mary at Richmond before heading into Carolina to tackle Davidson as the prelude to their drive for the State title.

Shifts Likely for Game With "Vandy."

It is probable that Coach Orville Neal will make shifts in the Gobbler line-up before the Commodore tussle. He may shift Harry Stark, 200-pound guard, from his place beside the pivot to tackle, his first gridiron love, where he played as a regular last fall. Neal has Earl Dyke and Red Kasun ready for a whirl at the tackle game in addition to Red Jones and Gene Hite. Stark will bolster the tackle talent, which even now is a strong point of the Poly team, with four letter men back and a strong sophomore array from the ranks of the 1929 freshman titleholders.

For three successive years the Poly team has left the Old Dominion behind to battle sectional or intersectional foes on foreign soil in their third game. The surge of the Poly attack three times reached high tide in this third battle and created traditions of brilliant performances on alien fields to back up an enviable record at home. In 1927-28 it was Colgate against whom the Pony Express back field unleased its tricky attack to the tune of one intersectional scalp in two tries. Last year it was the University that fought back a desperate Poly charge in the final half to save the day.

V. P. I. will head for the lair of the venerable Dan McGugin with memories of these games fresh in mind.

Plans for Field Trials At Petersburg Made

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Oct. 5.—The details of the annual field trials of the Virginia Field Trial Association to be held at former Camp Lee in Prince George County near Petersburg on November 10 and 11 were arranged at a meeting held last night. Much interest was manifested in the proceedings and it is expected that this will be one of the best and the largest attended trials the association has ever held. It was made clear that the entry of a dog is not required for attendance at the trials. All those interested in dogs and field trials are invited to the meet.

Among other things discussed at the meeting was the need of an adequate supply of horses. Raymond C. Parsons, of Petersburg, was made general chairman of the field trials. Dr. E. A. Robinson was made chairman of the dog committee and J. E. Failing his assistant. W. J. Moore, J. H. Parsons and S. Daily Craig were made the bench show committee. Publicity will be in charge of a committee composed of Hubert C. Talley, H. C. Tillery, H. G. Turner and J. E. Failing. The reception committee is composed of Gordon C. Morgan, chairman; T. S. Beckwith, W. C. Jones, R. H. Southworth, Charles Lunsford, James G. Scott, W. A. Bragg, Dr. R. A. Martin, Robert A. McKenney and Lemroy Jones.

PITTSBURGH NINE BEATS EAGLES

Visitors Rally Late in Game to Win, 9-8, at Heights.

By JOHN V. HINKEL.

COMING from behind in the last two innings, the Edgewood Club, sandlot champions of Pittsburgh, Pa., nosed out the Anacostia Eagles, District section title winners in the 1930 Capital City Baseball League, by a 9-to-8 score yesterday afternoon on the Congress Heights diamond. Between 400 and 500 fans watched the Eagles terminate their season with the clash.

The visiting team waged a game, uphill fight to beat the Washington camps. Entering the eighth frame four runs behind, the Edgewoods proceeded to knot the count after two were dead. In the ninth the Smoky City players shoved over what proved to be the winning marker, on a double and an Eagle error.

Mattingly in Form to Eighth.

Up until the eight inning Earl Mattingly, Anacostia pitcher, had hurled an excellent brand of ball, although his numerous passes had him in hot water several times. In this session Mattingly lost his control altogether, to regain it after the damage had been done. He hit Garbark to start the frame. Getz then cracked a two-baser to left, Garbark scoring. After Barnum sacrificed, the Eagle pitcher issued successive walks to Wilson, Radovich and Collins forcing the latter across, forcing in Getz. With the bases populated Wahler erred on Robertson's hot grounder, and Wilson and Radovich came across with the tying runs.

Garbark also inaugurated the ninth by crashing a double to deep left. He counted when Davis, Anacostia catcher, threw wildly over third in a vein attempt to catch him stealing.

Amateur 18.2 Title Match This Week

The New York Athletic Club has been selected as the scene of the first national amateur 18.2 balkline championship challenge match of the season, which will be played in New York on Friday and Saturday. Percy N. Collins, of Chicago, defending champion, and Edgar T. Appleby, of New York, former title holder, will meet in a 900-point match, played in three blocks of 300 points each. The championship will open on Friday night with blocks being played on Saturday afternoon and evening.

Danae Soccerists Give British Uniteds Lesson

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

WASHINGTON'S soccer enthusiasts had the unusual experience yesterday of witnessing the best game ever played here on the opening day of the season. H. M. S. Danae eleven gave the local British United kickers a soccer lesson that they will not forget for a while, and incidentally treated the uninformed Washingtonians to some clever play in downing the home squad, 3 to 2.

It is true that the British United eleven played a top-notch game all the way to give the British tars and marines a chance to demonstrate how the game should be played, but, with all of the Uniteds' recognized ability, it could not compare with the Danae booters.

Seamen Show Real Soccer.

Local fans have seen good combination play, clever trapping and fine defense play in the past, but the real art in soccer was an unknown quality to many until yesterday. Despite the fact that it was the first time that the Danae squad has played as a team, its forward line, consisting of Powell, Harris, Evans, Richardson and Tulip, combined in beautiful passing that the Uniteds found hard to break up.

It is difficult to pick an individual star when an eleven combines as the visitors did, but without doing injustice to the other seven, Harris, Evans and Richardson, on the forward line, and Mason, at goal, furnished a shade the most thrills for the fair-sized gathering.

British United started as if it would make short work of the visiting Englishmen, carrying the ball to position and putting it through for a goal in the first minute of play. Turner converting. But this happened before the Tars had shaken the barnacles from their legs, which, naturally, were not in good shape after the strenuous trip on the errand of mercy to San Domingo and back here.

But a few minutes elapsed between United's success and Danae's equalizing goal. Brown, Danae right back, staved off a second United attack with a well-directed boot to the waiting Dunston, left half, and the march toward the opponent's goal was on. After a spell of tricky passing, Tulip centered at the proper height and Richardson cleverly headed in for the tying marker.

Uniteds on Defense Much Of Time.

Danae's half-back line, Fox, Gray and Dunston, kept their forwards well fed, and as a consequence the United kickers were on the defense for most of the remainder of the half. Toward the closing of the first period, Powell drew Goalkeper Life out of his goal and then neatly passed to Evans, who banged the sphere through the uprights.

Early in the second half the Danae backs were hard pressed by a strong United attack, but the clever work of Capt. Legg and Brown staved them off. Soon the ball was in the local team's territory again, and Tulip passed to Richardson, who scored the final goal of the day.

The British United Eleven fought valiantly to the last, and late in the game staged a rally, led by Jess Burton and Hugh Lamont, that put them within a point of tieing. Young Elmer Knight, a newcomer on the British squad, scored United's goal from a pass off the toe of Jack Turner.

In the last minutes of the game, United made desperate efforts to score, attempting goals from 30 and 40 yards out, but could not beat the agile Mason. Jess Burton, Hugh Lamont, McRyan and Jack Turner were the United stars, although Goalie Life can not be forgotten for some of his great saves.

Capt. Harvey L. Miller had the Veterans of Foreign Wars Band on hand at the end of the match to serenade the visiting seamen. Nearly the entire band was on hand and the jolly English tars and marines freely expressed their appreciation for the entertainment.

PALACE-D.G.S. WINS OVER SAINTS

St. Stephen's Eleven Upset, 10 to 0, as Dearborn Stars.

A DISTINCT early season upset was registered yesterday afternoon on Gridiron No. 3, Monument Grounds, when the Palace D. G. S. Eleven, entrants in the 150-pound section of The Post's 1930 Capital City Football League, scored a decisive 10 to 0 triumph over the St. Stephen's Team, which is competing this fall in the unlimited division of the same league. More than 2,000 spectators viewed the contest.

Unusual interest centered in the clash as the winning club was champion of the 135-pound section of the league last year, while St. Stephen's won the 1929 title of the league's 150-pound class. Both teams are competing this fall in a higher weight section practically with the same combination which performed in 1929.

Dearborn in Star Role.

Dearborn, Palace full back, scored all of the winners' points. Early in the second period he booted a field goal from the 30-yard strip after the St. Stephen's line had stiffened and checked a would-be Palace touchdown sally. In the dying moments of the last quarter Dearborn took a short pass from Gheens and ran 20 yards for a touchdown. He also converted the extra point.

Intercepted passes proved costly to St. Stephen's, as did poor kicking. The line-plunging of Scanlon and Dearborn was prominent in the Palace attack. Quarter Back Nealon showed well for the losers.

THOROUGHBREDS ARRIVING FOR LAUREL MEETING

One of Many Feature Races Is $10,000 Selima Stakes.

86 Nominated for Race to Be Run on October 25.

Special to The Washington Post.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 5.—Thoroughbreds by the trainload and by buses have been arriving at the Laurel track within the past few days, with most of those which raced at the Havre de Grace meeting being vanned here yesterday, indicating that the fall Laurel meet, which starts Tuesday and calls for 23 days of racing, will be one of the best ever held at this popular track.

One of the features at the coming meet will be the Selima Stakes, which will be offered for the fifth time by the Maryland State Fair, Inc., on Saturday, October 25.

$10,000 Race in Memory Of Great Mare.

This $10,000 fixture was named in memory of the greatest mare of her time, the imported Selima, brought to Belair, Prince Georges County, Md., from England by Col. Benjamin Tasker, jr. Belair, which is now the property of William Woodward, the New York sportsman of Maryland ancestry, was the first home of the thoroughbred in this State.

By the Godolphin Arabian, Selima was foaled in 1746 and brought to Maryland in 1751, although the date of her importation is not definite. Before she was retired to the stud she was practically invincible in all her races. But her victories of nearly 200 years ago are of minor importance to her descendants.

Selima's blood flows in the veins of nearly every thoroughbred of distinction that has performed on American turf. Among others, Selima is the ancestress of the great horse Hanover, through her daughter Stella. Calypso, her great-granddaughter, is the fourth dam of Enquirer. Aerolite, dam of Spendthrift, is the male progenitor of Man o' War. Through her son, Pardner, Selima is the pedigree of American Eclipse, and her son Ariel was the sire of the sixth dam of Lexington. The Commando line and all of its descendants are traced to Selima.

Son of Selima "Man o' War" Of His Time.

Selima's best horse was Selim, foaled in 1759, and in his century was what Man o' War was in his.

That is the brief history of Selima, in whose memory the Maryland State Fair will offer a race during the coming session.

Silver Lustre, Violet Star, Bright Eyes, Yellow Flag, Allez Vite, Center Stone, Blind Lane, Batty, Dippy, Bucelette, Winfred West, Tweet Tweet, Risque, Pickmeup, Banderita, Sarah Constant, Miss Tony, Just Believe, Dark Edwina, Sunsena, Dark Magnet, Dark Ayress, Anne Arundel, Tuckahoe, Magothy, Pocomoke, Tred Avon, Brown Eagle, Shanette, Outburst, Glorious Betsy, Romanesque, Ladana, Zalla, Zaidee, Timely, Sun Parched, Green Light, Torchflare, Snowhite, Play Bird, Peach Basket, Firetop, Gun Play, Finger Tips, Occurance, Hareum Scarum, Thais, Puritan Lass, Potheen, Gosling, Pansette, Zelide, First Play, Berva and Buckup.

Walter M. Jefford's Bateau, winner of the Selima in 1927, holds the time record of 1:39 1-5.

Suburban Net Title Won by James Thomas

James Thomas, of the Bureau of Standards Club, is the newly-crowned singles champion of the Suburban Tennis League by virtue of his 2—6, 6—2, 13—11 triumph over Collin Stam, of Lakeview, in the finals of the league's annual fall net tournament played yesterday afternoon on the Wesley Heights courts.

Paired with Dean Judd, Thomas was also a member of the team which beat James McCabe and Stam, 6—4, 6—4, in a match for the 1930 doubles title of the league.

Bowie Stake Entries Will Close Saturday

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 5.—Joseph McLennan, race secretary of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association, whose 12-day fall meeting opens Monday, November 17, announced here today that the entries for the various stakes to be run at this meeting close on Saturday October 25.

The $10,000 Prince George automn Handicap, a mile and one-sixteenth race, exclusively for 3-year-olds, is the first big race at Bowie. It is carded for Monday, November 17, and Trainer Andy Schuttinger plans to keep James Butler's Questionnaire, the year's second best 3-year-old in training for the race.

The $30,000 Southern Maryland Handicap, a mile and one-sixteenth affair for 3-year-olds and upward, is slated for Saturday, November 22. This contest will likely see Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Beau, Joseph E. Widener's Curate and John R. MacComber's Petee Wrack among the starters.

HAWSKS BOW IN DEBUT, 6 TO 0

Lansdowne Scores on 90-Yard Run After Interception.

PENNY JOHNSON, 125 pounds of grit, energy and speed, turned near defeat into victory for the Lansdowne Athletic Club Eleven of Baltimore and spoiled the debut of the Mohawks yesterday in the opening of the local independent football season in Griffith Stadium.

With his team backed up to its 12-yard line as a result of a steady Mohawk drive in the last quarter, little Johnson jumped into the air, intercepted a lateral pass thrown by Ed Abbey, the Indians' playing coach, and ran 90 yards uninterrupted to cross the home club's goal line.

Johnson, who four years ago was the anchor man on the relay team of Calvert Hall, Baltimore prep school, was on his way with the ball before the Mohawks knew that he had it. Abbey, being unable to cover up, pursued him for about 15 yards, but was blocked by one of several Lansdowne interferers who quickly fell in behind the speeding ball carrier. Bender's try for the extra point failed.

Johnson Performs Brilliantly.

Throughout the game Johnson performed brilliantly at left end for the visitors. He smashed up Mohawk interference, turning attempted end runs inside of his position, and on punts was always down the field, ready to tackle the receiver.

The Mohawks, showing many new men, including Joe Sweeney and Snail DeLabre, formerly of the Apaches, had rushed and passed their way from the Lansdowne 25-yard line for a total gain of 62 yards when Johnson came through with the feature play.

As in past years, the Indians presented a strong line with "Moose" Mosko, formerly of Georgetown University and last year with the Apaches; Herman Lombard, former Maryland star, and O'Brien, a product of St. Bonaventure College, proving outstanding. Lansdowne was held to one first down.

The first half was uneventful, both teams resorting to much kicking. Neither goal line was neared.

Hawks Reach 5-Yard Line.

The Hawks got a fine chance to score in the third quarter when a Lansdowne punt on fourth down was blocked on the 7-yard line. But a 5-yard offside penalty set the Hawks back to the 12-yard line and they were able to advance only 10 in four downs, thus surrendering the ball.

Nate Weinstock, former Western Maryland University line star, now coaching the University of Baltimore, shared honors for Lansdowne with Johnson. Weinstock's tackling and backing-up of the line caused the Hawks plenty of trouble.

Celtics Beat Northerns, 6-4, as McIntire Stars

Alexandria, Oct. 5.—Lefty McIntire, Celtics' ace, today by stellar pitching won for the Virginians the undisputed independent baseball championship of Washington and Northern Virginia, defeating the Northern A. C., 6-4, in a well-played game of baseball at Baggett's stadium.

Both McIntire and Jewitt whiffed eight batters, but they were touched for plenty of hits. The Northerns made 11 and the Celtics 10. This was the seventeenth consecutive victory for the Celtics on their home field and ended their baseball season.

TAKOMA TIGER NINE WINS CAPITAL CITY CROWN

Dixie Pigs Bow After Taking Lead

11-to-6 Victory Gives Tigers Post's Gold Baseballs.

Sixth Inning Is Decisive as Clapper Is Knocked Out.

THE Takoma Tigers won the championship of the Capital City League yesterday, and The Washington Post's gold baseballs defeating the Dixie Pigs, Prince George's County winners, by a margin of 11-6 before more than 500 fans on the Silver Spring diamond. In clinching the major baseball title in this section, the Montgomery County champions came through the intersectional play-off series without a defeat.

The Tigers were forced to make a gallant uphill fight to win yesterday. Dick Hughes, the Takoma hurler, got off to a bad start and the Tigers, unable to hit Babe Clapper, trailed by a 5—0 score in the fourth inning. However, in the fifth, the Tigers opened up a barrage on Clapper that accounted for four runs. In the meanwhile, Hughes had found his stuff and was getting the Pigs out with regularity.

Tigers Clinch Decision In Sixth.

The Tigers routed Clapper and clinched the battle in the sixth inning when they slammed the ball to all corners of the lot for seven runs. Adair went to the mound for the Prince Georges Club and ended the slaughter, but too late.

James led the Tiger attack with two triples and a single; Fitzgerald hit a homer, Hatcher got a double and triple and Hessler and Baker came through with triples.

Ben Smith Shifted By Alabama Coach

University, Ala., Oct. 5.—Ben Smith, in having been moved from full back to end on the Alabama Eleven, is following in the footsteps of his older brother, Earl. Earl played full back on the 1925 frosh eleven and on the 1926 varsity. The following year he was shifted to end, and at the close of the season was elected captain for 1928.

He played a sparkling game as captain and was hailed by sports writers as one of the outstanding wingmen of the conference. Ben played full back on the 1929 frosh team, and subbed for Tony Holm at the same position last year. Durnig spring training he was moved to end and looked so good there that he has remained at a flank since then. The Alabama coaches' judgment in making the change has been vindicated, as Ben is playing regularly on the first team. To do this he had to beat out a senior letter man. Smith is over 6 feet tall, weighs 195 pounds, and is especially adept at snagging forward passes.

MARYLAND U. AT CAROLINA SATURDAY.

Old Liners Expected to Give N. C. U. a Real Battle.

Special to The Washington Post.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Oct. 5.—The University of North Carolina football squad stays at home this week to meet an ancient rival. The Tarheels and the Old Liners of Maryland have been meeting on the gridiron at intervals over a 31-year period, and Saturday will mark their twelfth renewal of an argument that started in 1899.

North Carolina won that game in 1899, 6 to 0. There was no renewal of the series until the fall of 1920, when Maryland won a 13-to-0 victory. Each year since has brought another of the "dog fall" battles, all close and hard fought, with the margin of victory small, except for last year, when Carolina's star backs won, 43 to 0.

Tarheels Leading in Series, 7—4.

The entire series shows the Tarheels leading in games won and lost by 7 to 4. Carolina has won its three-game margin in the last three years, while Maryland has been upsetting all dope and tieing Yale's Bulldogs regularly, 13-13 last year, after taking a 43-to-0 drubbing from the Tarheels.

Carolina won by 7-6 in 1927. The Tar Heels jumped into an early lead then the heavens opened and deluged the field, and Billy Ferrell's great punting preserved the narrow margin. Ward, Magner and the other star backs led Carolina to a 26-19 triumph the next year, and these same backs ran the margin up to 43-0 last year.

Maryland won a 14-6 decision in 1926 in the face of a brilliant 93-yard touchdown return by Gus McPherson, Carolina's sprint ace. Sides and Jenkins, Carolina reserves, led the Tar Heel "mud horses" to a 16-0 victory in 1925, and before that it was a nip and tuck series of close games with the tide of victory shifting almost every year.

Hard Struggle Looked for This Week.

The approaching contest bears all the pregame earmarks of another epic struggle. Maryland showed tremendous offensive power in an opening 60-0 win over Washington College, and played its usual good game against Yale today, meaning that Maryland is well set. North Carolina has eight of the best veteran backs in the South, the same crew who led the conference in scoring last year, and a rookie line that will fight the Old Liners to the last white line.

Va. White Sox Defeat Bethesda Nine, 10 to 4

Centennials Play Tie Game With Frat Team

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Oct. 5.—Mike Goldman's Alpha Delta Omega Football Team had a close call today from losing to the Centennials, of ashington, who held them to a scoreless tie, 0 to 0.

In second quarter, Carton missed an aerial heave from Whaley over the Fraters' goal line that would have given them the verdict. The Washingtonians threatened on two other occasions, but lacked the drive to put the ball across.

A pass, Sutton to Cabell, netted the Fraters 36 yards in the fourth period and gave the Virginians a chance to score a touchdown, but the Centennials' line held and they took the ball on downs, punting out of danger.

Alexandria, Oct. 5.—The Del Ray Athletic Club and the Engine Company No. 5 Gridders battled to a 0-0 tie on Edward Duncan Field this afternoon. Both teams used straight football the entire game and neither was in a position to score a touchdown. A good-sized crowd saw the contest.

AZTEC GRIDMEN WIN.

The Aztec 125-pound eleven showed real class yesterday afternoon on Gridiron No. 2, West Potomac Park, when it handily trounced the Wesley A. C.'s 135-pound team, 19-0. End runs by Paul Joray and Goldberg, and a pass, G. Joray to Walsh, scored the three touchdowns rung up by the winners. Harvey was the most consistent ground gainer for the Azteca, while Knapp starred for the losers.

VANDERBILT NEXT FOR V. P. I.

Poly Coach Planning Shifts for Game at Nashville.

Special to The Washington Post.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Oct. 5.—Vanderbilt's Commodores are the next opponents of Coach Orville and his Virginia Poly Eleven. The coming test at Nashville will be the first gridiron contest between V. P. I. and the Commodores, who rank among the pioneers of Dixie gridirons.

After the Vanderbilt game the Gobblers will return to Virginia soil for their annual capital city battle with William and Mary at Richmond before heading into Carolina to tackle Davidson as the prelude to their drive for the State title.

Shifts Likely for Game With "Vandy."

It is probable that Coach Orville Neal will make shifts in the Gobbler line-up before the Commodore tussle. He may shift Harry Stark, 200-pound guard, from his place beside the pivot to tackle, his first gridiron love, where he played as a regular last fall. Neal has Earl Dyke and Red Kasun ready for a whirl at the tackle game in addition to Red Jones and Gene Hite. Stark will bolster the tackle talent, which even now is a strong point of the Poly team, with four letter men back and a strong sophomore array from the ranks of the 1929 freshman titleholders.

For three successive years the Poly team has left the Old Dominion behind to battle sectional or intersectional foes on foreign soil in their third game. The surge of the Poly attack three times reached high tide in this third battle and created traditions of brilliant performances on alien fields to back up an enviable record at home. In 1927-28 it was Colgate against whom the Pony Express back field unleased its tricky attack to the tune of one intersectional scalp in two tries. Last year it was the University that fought back a desperate Poly charge in the final half to save the day.

V. P. I. will head for the lair of the venerable Dan McGugin with memories of these games fresh in mind.

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Oct. 5.—The details of the annual field trials of the Virginia Field Trial Association to be held at former Camp Lee in Prince George County near Petersburg on November 10 and 11 were arranged at a meeting held last night. Much interest was manifested in the proceedings and it is expected that this will be one of the best and the largest attended trials the association has ever held. It was made clear that the entry of a dog is not required for attendance at the trials. All those interested in dogs and field trials are invited to the meet.

Among other things discussed at the meeting was the need of an adequate supply of horses. Raymond C. Parsons, of Petersburg, was made general chairman of the field trials. Dr. E. A. Robinson was made chairman of the dog committee and J. E. Falling his assistant. W. J. Moore, J. H. Parsons and S. Daily Craig were made the bench show committee. Publicity will be in charge of a committee composed of Hubert C. Talley, H. C. Tillery, H. G. Turner and J. E. Falling. The reception committee is composed of Gordon C. Morgan, chairman; T. S. Beckwith, W. C. Jones, R. H. Southworth, Charles Lunsford, James G. Scott, W. A. Bragg, Dr. R. A. Martin, Robert A. McKenney and Lemroy Jones.

FATHER HARVIN.

Charlotte, N. C., Oct. 5.—When Father Lumpkin was starting his rampages at Georgia Tech, Lionel Harvin was only a Clemson Tiger freshman full back. Now he's being called "another Father Lumpkin."

PITTSBURGH NINE BEATS EAGLES

Visitors Rally Late in Game to Win, 9-8, at Heights.

By JOHN V. HINKEL.

COMING from behind in the last two innings, the Edgewood Club, sandlot champions of Pittsburgh, Pa., nosed out the Anacostia Eagles, District section title winners in the 1930 Capital City Baseball League, by a 9-to-8 score yesterday afternoon on the Congress Heights diamond. Between 400 and 500 fans watched the Eagles terminate their season with the clash.

The visiting team waged a game, uphill fight to beat the Washington camps. Entering the eighth frame four runs behind, the Edgewoods proceeded to knot the count after two were dead. In the ninth the Smoky City players shoved over what proved to be the winning marker, on a double and an Eagle error.

Mattingly in Form to Eighth.

Up until the eight inning Earl Mattingly, Anacostia pitcher, had hurled an excellent brand of ball, although his numerous passes had him in hot water several times. In this session Mattingly lost his control altogether, to regain it after the damage had been done. He hit Garbark to start the frame. Getz then cracked a two-baser to left, Garbark scoring. After Barnum sacrificed, the Eagle pitcher issued successive walks to Wilson, Radovich and Collins forcing the latter across, forcing in Getz. With the bases populated Wahler erred on Robertson's hot grounder, and Wilson and Radovich came across with the tying runs.

Garbark also inaugurated the ninth by crashing a double to deep left. He counted when Davis, Anacostia catcher, threw wildly over third in a vain attempt to catch him stealing.

Amateur 18.2 Title Match This Week

The New York Athletic Club has been selected as the scene of the first national amateur 18.2 balkline championship challenge match of the season, which will be played in New York on Friday and Saturday. Percy N. Collins, of Chicago, defending champion, and Edgar T. Appleby, of New York, former title holder, will meet in a 900-point match, played in three blocks of 300 points each. The championship will open on Friday night with blocks being played on Saturday afternoon and evening.

Many of the offers presented here will be gone tomorrow.

Danae Soccerists Give British Uniteds Lesson

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

WASHINGTON'S soccer enthusiasts had the unusual experience yesterday of witnessing the best game ever played here on the opening day of the season. H. M. S. Danae eleven gave the local British United kickers a soccer lesson that they will not forget for a while, and incidentally treated the uninformed Washingtonians to some clever play in downing the home squad, 3 to 2.

It is true that the British United eleven played a top-notch game all the way to give the British tars and marines a chance to demonstrate how the game should be played, but, with all of the Uniteds' recognized ability, it could not compare with the Danae booters.

Seamen Show Real Soccer.

Local fans have seen good combination play, clever trapping and fine defense play in the past, but the real art in soccer was an unknown quality to many until yesterday. Despite the fact that it was the first time that the Danae squad has played as a team, its forward line, consisting of Powell, Harris, Evans, Richardson and Tulip, combined in beautiful passing that the Uniteds found hard to break up.

It is difficult to pick an individual star when an eleven combines as the visitors did, but without doing injustice to the other seven, Harris, Evans and Richardson, on the forward line, and Mason, at goal, furnished a shade the most thrills for the fair-sized gathering.

British United started as if it would make short work of the visiting Englishmen, carrying the ball to position and putting it through for a goal in the first minute of play. Turner converting. But this happened before the Tars had shaken the barnacles from their legs, which, naturally, were not in good shape after the strenuous trip on the errand of mercy to San Domingo and back here.

United's on Defense Much Of Time.

Danae's half-back line, Fox, Gray and Dunston, kept their forwards well fed, and as a consequence the United kickers were on the defense for most of the remainder of the half. Toward the closing of the first period, Powell drew Goalkeper Life out of his goal and then neatly passed to Evans, who banged the sphere through the uprights.

Early in the second half the Danae backs were hard pressed by a strong United attack, but the clever work of Capt. Legg and Brown staved them off. Soon the ball was in the local team's territory again, and Tulip passed to Richardson, who scored the final goal of the day.

The British United Eleven fought valiantly to the last, and late in the game staged a rally, led by Jess Burton and Hugh Lamont, that put them within a point of tieing. Young Elmer Knight, a newcomer on the British squad, scored United's goal from a pass off the toe of Jack Turner.

In the last minutes of the game, United made desperate efforts to score, attempting goals from 30 and 40 yards out, but could not beat the agile Mason. Jess Burton, Hugh Lamont, McRyan and Jack Turner were the United stars, although Goalie Life can not be forgotten for some of his great saves.

Capt. Harvey L. Miller had the Veterans of Foreign Wars Band on hand at the end of the match to serenade the visiting seamen. Nearly the entire band was on hand and the jolly English tars and marines freely expressed their appreciation for the entertainment.

PALACE-D.G.S. WINS OVER SAINTS

St. Stephen's Eleven Upset, 10 to 0, as Dearborn Stars.

A DISTINCT early season upset was registered yesterday afternoon on Gridiron No. 3, Monument Grounds, when the Palace D. G. S. Eleven, entrants in the 150-pound section of The Post's 1930 Capital City Football League, scored a decisive 10 to 0 triumph over the St. Stephen's Team, which is competing this fall in the unlimited division of the same league. More than 2,000 spectators viewed the contest.

Unusual interest centered in the clash as the winning club was champion of the 135-pound section of the league last year, while St. Stephen's won the 1929 title of the league's 150-pound class. Both teams are competing this fall in a higher weight section practically with the same combination which performed in 1929.

Dearborn in Star Role.

Dearborn, Palace full back, scored all of the winners' points. Early in the second period he booted a field goal from the 30-yard strip after the St. Stephen's line had stiffened and checked a would-be Palace touchdown sally. In the dying moments of the last quarter Dearborn took a short pass from Gheens and ran 20 yards for a touchdown. He also converted the extra point.

Intercepted passes proved costly to St. Stephen's, as did poor kicking. The line-plunging of Scanlon and Dearborn was prominent in the Palace attack. Quarter Back Nealon showed well for the losers.

EARNSHAW AND GRIMES DUE TO PITCH FIFTH GAME

Dykes Is Goat In Defeat of Grove

Haines Victor Exactly Four Years After Beating Yanks.

Series Deadlocked as Cards Stage Great Comeback.

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

SPORTSMANS PARK, St. Louis, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—The Red Birds, in the full flight of one of the greatest of world's series comebacks, flew up to even terms today with the Athletics, deadlocking the baseball battle at two games each.

They swooped down on the great Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove and beat the famous southpaw, 3 to 1, while his defense crumbled about him, and his heavy artillery was effectively spiked after the first inning by 37-year-old Jesse Joseph Haines in a highly dramatic battle, the fourth game of the series.

With the roaring echo of a home town crowd of 39,946 fans reverberating, the veteran right-hander of the Cardinals surpassed even the brilliant southpawing of Bill Hallahan, hero of yesterday's St. Louis victory as he hurled the high-flying Red Birds to their second straight conquest.

Only One Hit in 8 Innings.

Haines held the slugging Mackmen to four singles altogether and, although a trifle wild at times, he allowed only one safe blow in the last eight innings as he celebrated the fourth anniversary of his shutout against the New York Yankees here on October 5, 1923.

Four years ago to the day and hour, time and place, Haines not only blanked the Yankees but contributed a home run to the victory that put the Cardinals in the lead and enabled them later to overcome the New Yorkers in the last world's series triumph scored by the forces of the National League.

Today, the big Phillipsburg, Ohio, right-hander, classed among baseball's pitching ancients, not only baffled the heavy hitters of the world's champions, but lashed his rival, Grove, for a hit that tied the score and spurred his teammates to continue their attack decisively on the fire-ball southpaw in the fourth inning.

A fatal wild throw by Jimmy Dykes, the usually reliable third sacker of the Athletics, enabled the Cardinals to score what proved to be the winning run in the fourth inning, the last in which the Red Birds were able to do a thing with the speed and curves of the great Grove.

Dykes Throws Poorly To Foxx.

Two were out and Chick Hafey, the bespectacled Cardinal left fielder, was on second as the result of a ground rule double into the right-field bleacher screen, when Dykes took a smash from Ray Blades' bat, passed up a chance to tag out Hafey on the base line, near third, and then threw wildly to Jimmy Foxx for an attempted third putout at first. Dykes, for some unaccountable reason, stepped around Hafey in order to take the chance on a throw-out, but the toss was so wide that it got away from Foxx. Hafey was across the plate by the time Foxx got the ball to Cochrane.

Two subsequent scratch hits, a Texas leaguer to right by Wilson and a single off Grove's glove by Gelbert, accounted for the third Cardinal run, but it proved just that much margin of safety. The damage to the cause of the Athletics had been done and not even the hitless pitching of Grove for the last four innings could do anything about it.

For the second successive day the maulers of the House of Mack were held in check except for Al Simmons, who drove in their only run in the first inning and collected two of the four hits gained off the fast and baffling delivery of Haines.

Series Now Rated Free-for-All.

As a result, the series that started out like a rout for the Athletics now has become a free-for-all, with the Cardinals on the crest of the wave and playing the kind of dashing, effective baseball that swept them to their sensational pennant victory by winning the third and fourth games behind the brilliant box work of Hallahan and Haines; after dropping the first two decisions to Grove and Earnshaw, the Cardinals duplicated the achievement of the Giants in pulling up to square the count at 2-all with the White Sox in 1917. The Giants lost that series, by dropping the next two games, and the history of the championship lists no club as the ultimate victor after losing the first two contests in a seven-game series, but these Cardinals were confident tonight that they will be the first to turn the trick and create a record.

If they can continue their winning streak and turn the tables tomorrow on their other conqueror, George Earnshaw, in the fifth game, with Burleigh Grimes back in the box, the Red Birds will be on the high road to victory.

Champion Racing Mare Needs Company at Post

Chicago, Oct. 4 (A.P.).—It paid to humor the temperamental Lady Broadcast, this year's champion racing mare.

Lady Broadcast, 4 years old, for two years threatened to do something, but didn't. She was so high strung when the barrier lifted she couldn't do her best.

Johnny Goode, trainer for Rogers Caldwell, of Nashville, the owner, sent her to the post this year with a stable mate, a tipy pony.

She immediately showed gratitude and in the $28,000 Lincoln handicap came from ninth position to win in the last half mile of the mile race for a track record of 2:03.3.

DRILL FOR PET PENNANTS.

The Petworth Pennants will practice tonight and Thursday at 7:30 o'clock on the Iowa Avenue Playgrounds. All members of the team must be present or telephone Manager McPherson regarding weighing in for play in the Capital City League. They meet the Wolverines next Sunday in their first series game.

HOLDS CARDINALS' HOPES TODAY

Back in the opening game, Burleigh Grimes comes back to the world series firing line today with hopes of the Cardinals and all St. Louis leaning on his pitching. This veteran exponent of the spitball has the chance to hurl back the Athletics to give the Cardinals the edge in the series.

ATHLETICS BATTING WITH TEARS IN EYES

Tonight he is the West's choice for President.

Mention him to any member of the Athletics and you are apt to have an ear chewed off. Gelbert not only personally robbed the Mackmen of enough hits and runs to win a ball game, but he was bad news at the bat, too. He had a batting average of 1.000 for the afternoon and it was his three-bagger in the fourth that tied up the score and relieved the Cards of the last vestige of an inferiority complex.

John Gelbert may have been a famous name in America last week, but Charles Gelbert is better known at the moment.

Gelbert, playing in his first world series, made stops and tosses today that even eye witnesses don't really believe happened. It must have been all done by mirrors.

He was the best eight men on the St. Louis nine.

The other fellow was old Jess Haines, who just toyed with the visiting firemen. Jess spent the afternoon getting himself into holes and then getting himself out again. After the third inning he held the opposition hitless.

There was hardly an inning which Jess didn't appear to be on the verge of coming apart, but he was just kidding the public.

Every series must have a "goat," and Jimmy Dykes is it at the moment. It was a wild toss.

With two out in the fourth and with the chukker apparently over, Dykes made a bad throw of Blade's grounder. It should have been an easy third out, but Hafey scored on the play and Blades was safe at first.

Give the Cards an inch and they take a city. Wilson then singled and up came the invincible Gelbert with a hit htat scored Blades.

From the McGillicuddy standpoint it was all very painful.

Now we have to start this world's series all over from scratch again today.

The attitude of the Athletics tonight is that it may have been a mistake to start in the first place.

Red Pants to Confront Kansas Football Foes

Lawrence, Kans., Oct. 4 (A.P.).—The colors of autumn leaves will have nothing on the University of Kansas Eleven this fall.

Bright red pants of airplane cloth, with a strip of blue webbing on the back of each leg; cream colored jersey with red numerals in front and back, blue and white helmets and red topped short hose are included in equipment purchases for the 1930 season.

The suits are designed especially for warm days and the two night games the Jayhawkers have scheduled. Kansas will be the only Big Six team to play at night.

SAYS PEGLER

found that having a band or not having one affects the players one iota, so the proposition is always strictly a matter of choice, and I would never criticise any one for something that was positively unimportant to me.

The facts of the case, if you want my opinion, are that most of the bands that play at ball parks on pennant raising days and at the world series sound like somebody hired the musicians off some dray, and moreover, their uniforms generally do not fit and when they try to march they are probably bowlegged and have feet like waiters. As for any club owner in the national game being too much of a money lover to spend money for a band if he thought the fans really wanted music, that is too ridiculous to argue about with any such sensible body of citizens as the readers of the Daily (name your paper).

Phonograph Records Better Than Fine Bands.

I personally thought the phonograph music in Philadelphia was just the right amount and it is foolish to argue that any pick-up band, even if you paid them $150 a day and carfare, would be as god as the marvelous music you can get on a phonograph record for 75 cents, with the world's best musicians playing on it.

Criticisms of this kind are destructive in nature and unjust to a fine, liberal sportsman and club owner, as I am sure al lloyal fans wil lagree when they understand the facts.

From now on its is a duel to the death and I think I can assure the followers who have been supoprting us so loyally all along that if we do not become the world champions by the end of the final game I will be a mighty disappointed and surprised man, together with al lthe members of my team.

I can say no more. From now on, action will tell the story of the drama.

Seabrook Clinches Series With Bowie

The Seabrook A. C. Nine closed its season yesterday by defeating Bowie, Prince Georges County chams last year, in the second of a three-game series, 19 to 7. The victory gave Seabrook the series as it had beaten Bowie, 15 to 13, in the first clash between the two teams.

Allie Long, on the mound for the winners, struck out 14 opponents and was never in any serious danger. Curtis led the Seabrook attack, three doubles and a single in four trips to the platter.

V. Flaherty, D. C. Boy, On Marquette Squad

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 4.—Marquette University's football squad of 1930 include's athletes from eight States, the District of Columbia and one province of Canada, according to a late compilation.

The States represented are Wisconsin, Michigan, North Dakota, South Dakota, Illinois, Minnesota, Massachusetts and Indiana.

Charles Sharples, of Claresholm, Alta., is the Canadian husky on the squad, and he has the unique distinction of never having seen a football game before coming to Marquette. Vincent Flaherty, of Washington, is the District of Columbia delegate.

French Strong for Athletics.

Paris, Oct. 4 (A.P.).—Nearly 4,000,000 men and women are active athletes in France, though tennis is the only sport in which the country is supreme.

ALCORA SEEKS GAMES.

Manager Charles Deuterman, of the Alcora Motor Company Eleven, is booking games with other 150-pound teams at Clarendon 1078-x-1 after 7 o'clock each evening.

G. U. LINEMAN BREAKS ARM

Brickman Injured in Loyola Game; College Teams Drill.

THEIR hopes for a successful season considerably buoyed by a 16-6 defeat of the strong Loyola eleven in Chicago last Friday, Georgetown's gridiron warriors this afternoon will begin preparation for the night clash with West Virginia Wesleyan scheduled Friday night in the illuminated Griffith Stadium.

The Loyola conquest was not achieved without cost, however, as Charley Brickman, right guard, suffered a broken arm and will be out of the game indefinitely. His loss may be felt in the forthcoming game because it is doubtful that any of the reserve guards measure up to him in the art of interfering, correct performance of which is vital to success in the Georgetown system.

Maryland to Battle Terheels.

While the Hilltoppers drill for the Bobcats, the other members of the Capital collegiate group will be practicing for Saturday games. Maryland will meet North Carolina at Chapel Hill, George Washington will oppose Delaware at Newark, Del., Catholic University will tackle Holy Cross at Worcester, and American and Gallaudet will clash in a strictly local contest.

Maryland, beaten, 40 to 13, by Yale, faces another tough customer in North Carolina U., the team generally conceded to be the strongest in Dixie. Coach Curley Byrd's Old Liners lost at New Haven by a wider margin than the experts anticipated, but actually the defaet was not as bad as indicated by the score. Fumbles cost Maryland a chance to make the score closer.

George Washington, while not justifying the high hopes of its supporters, gave promise despite the Rutgers defeat of developing into the strongest eleven the downtown school has had in many years. Delaware does not hold the prospect of affording the Colonoials as much opposition as did Rutgers.

Catholic Plays Holy Cross At Worcester.

Catholic U. again runs into a team out of its class when it plays Holy Cross. It is quite certain that the Cardinals, weakened by injuries, will suffer another trying afternoon. The Franklin and Marshall game last Saturday yielded further injuries to Capt. George Menke, guard; Hugh Flynn, tackle, and Carl DeMello, half back, three valuable members of the Brookland squad.

Two undefeated teams will clash in the American-Gallaudet game. A fierce struggle is looked for with Gallaudet slightly favored.

V. M. I.-Citadel Series Resumed on Saturday

Lexington, Va., Oct. 4.—Now that the Richmond and St. John's games are behind them, members of the V. M. I. Flying Squadron are preparing for two home-coming day games in a row. On Saturday, October 11, the Cadets will be the guests of the Citadel in a military classic at Charleston, S. C., and a week later Virginia will come to Lexington for V. M. I.'s own home-coming game on Alumni Field.

Saturday's battle will mark the third meeting between the Virginia and South Carolina military colleges. In 1920 the Bull Dogs met the undefeated original Flying Squadron at Lynchburg, and went down before Jimmie Leech and his all-star cast by a count of 35 to 0.

Last year Coach Johnny Floyd brought a fighting team to Lexington to meet Bill Raftery's State championship eleven. The Bull Dogs, led by Wilson, a sensational back, gave the Cadets a real scare before taking the short end of a 13-to-7 score.

No Need for Sweat Shirts.

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 4 (A.P.).—Football players who take part in early games at the new State Fair Association Stadium here won't have much use for sweat shirts. While up until November the weather in Texas will still be warm, anyway, the playing field is 15 feet below ground level and there will be little chance for a breeze.

CARDS' FANS CHEERED BY VICTORY

Hafey Starts Trouble for Grove With Trick Drive.

was a bit of a moan from here and theer and folks were sitting back a little.

Then Grove tried to slip a third consecutive strike through and Haines came around with that flat swing of his. He caught the ball squarely out in front and it rifled back through the box and out over second base while Shortstop Gelbert merely throttled home with the tying run an dthe cowbells and battlebones were poured into a pot-pourri of racket such as is seldom heard.

The Cardinals finished the game in the next inning. A few little slips by the supposedly impeccable A.'s had much to do with this gesture.

Hafey Starts Fireworks.

Two were out when the shooting started and Fielder Charles (Chick) Hafey, who wears speciacles and is said to hit a baseball as hard as any man, was the hitter. He had a strike and a ball to his credit when he picked out a fast one and shot it to right field. It struck about three-quarters of the way up the green fence, just beyond Fielder Miller's reach and seemed to hang, like a green apple, on the wire screen that covers the wall at that point. Then it dropped down behind the netting while Fielder Miller pawed frantically at it and Fielder Hafey legged it around to second base.

Mr. Hafey might have kept on running indefinitely before Miller got the ball out of its web, but the four umpires closed on on him, each holding two fingers aloft as a reminder that local ground rules, the nature of which had been kept strictly secret among the blue-garbed mediators, covered the situation and that two bases only were allowed on a ball that got iself into such a predicament.

The ruling did not take into account such an emergency as that which arose when Mr. Miller failed to corner Mr. Gelbert's bank shot in the preceding inning and got three bases, but then umpires are not paid for knowing the abstruse details of geometric angles and could not be expected to have figured this out.

Dykes Makes Poor Throw.

As it was, Fielder Hafey was on second base and there were two out with Substitute Fielder Blades hitting. Blades drove sharply down the third base line where Third Baseman Dykes, a thick-chested, square-jawed little man, who was quite the hero of the series last year, but who hasn't been so blustry this season, grabbed it after quite a wrestle and threw to first base. The throw went far to Mr. Foxx's right and Fielder Hafey hatsened home while Blades went on down to second base.

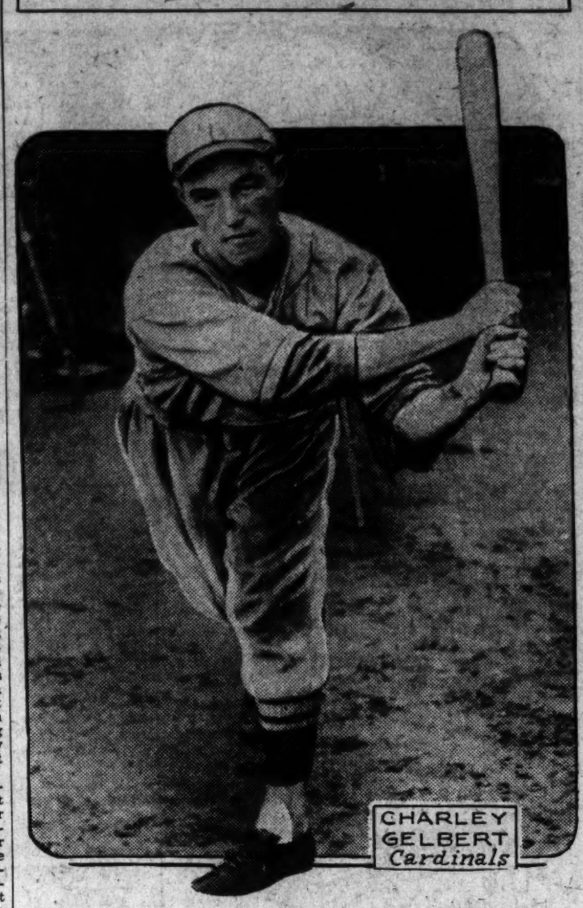
Catcher Wilson, who has hit effectively when hits were needed in the two games played since he took over the catching work from young Gus Mancuso, then pushed a single into right field and Blades was across with yet another run; a superfluous run withal, but one that gave Mr. Haines more confidence as he went along and probably contributed no little moral support and aid to the Cardinals' victory. Shortstop Gelbert got another single after that, the ball bounding off Pitcher Grove's glove, but it was neither needed, nor productive.

Both Clubs Going Hitless.

From that moment on, the Cardinals went hitless, even as the Athletics were going hitless with them. The St. Louis fans gave way to their feelings as inning after inning passed and it became more and more evident that Mr. Haines was the master of the situation.

They leaped for four balls hit into the stands with an avidity that promised no end of damage to their perplayers with cat-calls and even sons and they bounded the Athletic rafters their contumely upon the bowed and gray head of poor old Mr. McGillicuddy, sitting down there along with his score card and his grief. They taunted him with being the "monster mind," which they regarded as a jocose play on "master mind," which the old gentleman has been called and they demanded to know why he didn't send Mr. Grove home and bring out a pitcher.

YOUNG INFIELDER SHINES



This young man played probably the best game of his career yesterday at shortstop for the Cardinals. In addition to his brilliant fielding, Gelbert's triple and single figured in the scoring of two runs.

Cards Defeat Macks, 3-1, Behind Haines' Pitching

the score when Gelbert connected for a triple to the right field wall, and Haines himself produced the tying tally with a scorching single through the box. It was the lower end of the St. Louis batting order that brought defeat to Grove. Douthit, Adams, Frisch and Bottomley went hitless, as did Blades. To Gelbert, rising young star of the Cardinals, went two of their five hits.

Connie Mack stuck by Grove. Twice in the later innings with the team trailing by two runs and a pinch hitter deemed expedient, he allowed the notoriously weak-hitting pitcher to take his turn at the plate. With one on and one out in the seventh, the master mind of the Mackmen allowed Grove to take his regular turn at bat and Haines was helped over this crisis by Grove's pitcher-like strikeout.

The Cardinals are back in the hearts of St. Louis. The two teams resume tomorrow in the fifth game. The Cards are playing with new confidence, a new abandon in this series, the type of ball that carried them to their sensational National League pennant triumph. The cause of the National League is looking up, indeed.

Grimes Due to Pitch Today.

Grimes goes back to the mound for Manager Street tomorrow and the memory of his five-hit though losing performance in Philadelphia, is still fresh in the minds of the home town fans. Mack, in his customary silence, will not divulge the name of his pitcher until near game time tomorrow.

It is expected to be George Earnshaw. With Grove beaten and the others of his staff not highly rated, Mack seems constrained to choose the big right-hander who won the second game so impressively.

In all events, the series will move back to Philadelphia on Wednesday after a day of travel. Grove doubtless will be seen in action again. So will Haines. Developments point to their clash in the sixth or seventh game as the decisive meeting of the series. It is now hazardous to predict the winner. This correspondent still likes the Athletics.

Heartened by the Cardinals' victory of yesterday, it was a noticeably gayer crowd that filled every seat and swarmed the runways of the quaint old park. Saturday's sun had not yet put in an appearance and there were no indications that it would. The shirt-sleeved bleacherites of yesterday who lent a midseason touch to this post-season series had mysteriously vanished from their center field points of vantage where coated customers provided a more somber background for hitters at the plate.

Expert predictions were again justified when Connie Mack sent Lefty Grove to the mound, after tipping off his hand when he ordered Grove to take part in the pregame hitting drill, the first time that a Philadelphia pitcher has engaged in batting practice since the start of the series. It was Grove against Haines, the fast-ball veteran of the Cardinals.

St. Louis Patrons Are Gayer.

The throng's gayety was subdued with the first play of the game. It was a single down the first-base line by Max Bishop, leading off for the Athletics. It was his fourth in his last five times at bat and he quickly reached second when Jimmy Dykes laid down a conventional bunt to Haines for a sacrifice. Cheers of relief greeted Adams' fine catch of Cochrane's pop foul for the second out but complete joy was reserved with Al Simmons at bat. Simmons drove in the first run of the game with a clean single to right field, Bishop scoring easily. Jimmy Foxx then contributed the Macks' third hit of the inning, an easy roller which Frisch played poorly but escaped an error by the scorers' grace. Simmons went to second on the play and a wild pitch sent him to third but he perished on the bases with Foxx when Miller grounded to Gelbert and was the victim of a clever stop and throw.

Grove Fans Douthit in First.

Grove's strikeout prowess asserted itself in the Cards' first appearance at bat when he fanned Douthit with a sweeping curve. Adams and Frisch tossing out Bottomley on a play at first that appeared to be safe, Bishop throwing out Hafey and Haas going back for Blades' fly.

Haines was in mildly trying straits in the seventh, and not until Blades gathered in Bishop's try for a homer hard by the right field fence was he out of trouble. Haas led off with a walk and the count was three and two on Boley when a pop to Frisch resulted. Mack allowed Grove to bat for himself as the heads of the grandstand managers shook in disapproval while their hearts registered high glee. Grove struck out in pitcher-like fashion and Bishop's out was the third.

Bishop Saves Grove By Catch.

Thanks to Max Bishop, Grove survived the seventh unscathed. Wilson had flied out to Miller and Gelbert was on second by virtue of a walk and Haines' sacrifice bunt when Douthit sent a lazy looper to right that had all the earmarks of a Texas leaguer, a sure double, but Bishop galloped back on the grass and with a last lunging leap stuck out a big glove that brought the ball to cover for the third out, and even partisan customers could not suppress a rousing cheer for the play.

The eighth was the fifth hitless inning for the Mackmen, albeit not without a threat, for Jimmy Dykes led off with a walk. Cochrane could help none with a fly to Blades, but the necessary two runs to tie the score were in the making with Simmons at bat. Gelbert came through in this crisis, taking Simmons' hard grounder and rifling it to first for a close but decisive out. There was still the menace of Jimmy Foxx, but again a fly to Blades resulted.

Three fly balls disposed of the Cardinals in their eighth as Grove registered his fourth consecutive hitless inning. Adams and Frisch lofted to Miller and Bottomley hoisted to Haas and the crowd sat back to await what appeared to be the Athletics' final effort.

Haines fed Miller nothing that looked like a strike and the swarthy right fielder went out on a fly to Blades. The count was two and two on Haas and he grounded to Gelbert. The game belonged to the Cardinals when Boley flied to the busy Blades.

PRACTICE FOR AZTECS.

Practice sessions for Tuesday and Thursday of this week are scheduled for the Aztec 125-pound team. All players who expect to compete in the Sport Mart League this year with the club are asked to see Capt. G. Jorsy as soon as possible.

INFIELD STAR PRAISED BY MACKMEN

Brilliant Work of Gelbert Factor in Victory.

the world's champions remarked, "are a part of the game and must be expected.

"The Cardinals deserved victory," he said. "We did not play up to our usual standard. Haines pitched a remarkable game and was brilliantly supported, particularly by Shortstop Gelbert, who was, by all odds, the fielding star of the game, as the grounders he came in for robbed us of two hits and those two hits might have put us in the ball game, as when the score is as close as this was today it does not take much to change the result. Yes, sir, that boy is a great shortstop.

Mack Praises Grove For Effort.

"Without any doubt, the Cardinals are a great team, but no greater than I expected they would be. At no time have we underestimated them.

"Grove pitched a better game than he did in Philadelphia, when he won his game. If Miller had held Gelbert's drive to right to two bases, and if Dykes had not erred, Grove would have had a shutout, but I have no criticism because of those misplays. Errors are part of the game. We have to expect them.

"Grove did not underestimate Haines' ability as a batter. He had him two and nothing in the third and threw him what was intended to be a curve ball on the inside. The ball did not break. It did not curve a hair's breadth and Haines smashed it through Bob.

"Some of our players did not use good judgment at bat, going after bad ones when they had the chance to take bases on balls, but perhaps we should give the credit to Haines for perplexing them.

"Yes, Bishop's catch of Douthit's fly to right field was one of the sensational plays of the series, but to my way of thinking Gelbert's was the more brilliant.

Cards' Lower Batters Annoy A's.

"Grove did not sulk when the things that went wrong deprived him of a shutout. He never sulks when errors are made behind him. All he asks is that the boys get some runs for him.

"The bottom of the Cardinal batting order has been giving us the most trouble. Our pitchers seem to have disposed of the top of the order, where the best hitters are supposed to be, rather easily, but the catchers and Gelbert have been

This strange man sees the way and tells it all. Just what your life has been, just what it will be. Tells you when and whom you will marry; whether husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false. Tells as to changes, travel, lost or absent friends, divorce, wills, deeds; whether it is best to buy or sell. He tells the good and the bad. A visit will convince you of his wonderful power.

Something tells you this is the man. You feel the impulse to call. Do not delay.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE DELAY BETWEEN BITES

(In a book, "A Remedy for Disappearing Game Fishes," of which he is author, President Hoover lauds fishing as next to prayer the most personal relationship of man. "But," he concludes, it is too long between bites. We must have more fish in proportion to the water."

I

THE tariff's a problem that fills me with woe;
It gives me the deepest concern
That commerce and trade are distressingly low
And showing few signs of a turn.
The wet and dry questions most bothersome are,
And crime gives me troublesome nights,
But I know a problem that's bigger by far—
The length of the time between bites!

II.

THIS wide unemployment distresses me much
As industry fails to get hot;
The market's bad action has kept me in Dutch—
Oh, tough is a President's job!
Reviving good times and preserving world peace
Are objects no public man slights,
But there is a problem important as these—
The needless delay between bites!

III.

THE farm problem's one that I never will shirk—
I'm grieved by the excess of wheat;
I'm doing my best to give working men work
And bring back prosperity sweet.
The crisis in Europe I view with despair;
I'm worried by tariff-wall fights,
But there is no problem so big anywhere
As that of the time between bites.

IV.

WORLD peace is a matter all statesmen desire,
Disarmament, too, is our need;
To brotherly love all great nations aspire;
From burdens of war we'd be freed.
These hopes all command our attention and thought,
But I know one more that delights
The musings of mankind at large as it ought—
A lot less delay between bites!

V.

AND so in the White House when troubles I scan,
And I'm overburdened by care,
I pack up and scoot for the old Rapidan
To work on my problems out there;
And I know of nothing to keep this world gay
With happiness, free from respites,
Than solving the problem—and that right away—
Of needless delay between bites!

MR. TUTTLE, the New York Republican gubernatorial nominee, is a tennis player of no mean ability. And Tammany will be among those compelled to admit that his volleying is perfect.

HE KNEW ALL.

"He has always liked to play bridge," says Mrs. Tuttle of the Republican nominee, "and even before our marriage he asked me, not knowing I didn't play it, to be his partner in a tournament. I don't know how I did it, but I got through with it."

• • • •

TUSH! Tush! Or rather, Tut! Tut! Once a prober, always a prober. Mr. Tuttle probably was in complete possession of all the facts all the time. What Mrs. Tuttle should have done was to waive immunity and put all her cards on the table.

PIPE DREAMS.

'Twas in a U. S. P. O.
I was astonished when
Imagine my amazement,
I found a perfect pen.

Now being in a hurry,
I grabbed the first in sight
And started on an address;
Great Scott, that pen could write!

In my surprise I broke it,
Prepared then for the worst,
I went and picked another
As perfect as the first!

One hardly would believe me,
Those pens I found that night
Moved me to exaltation—
You couldn't hear them write!

I gazed in wonder 'round me,
Oh Lord, but it seemed queer—
A thousand people writing
With pens you couldn't hear!

MAN HURT ON ROAD IS THOUGHT KNOWN AS HENRY GENTRY

9uthorities Have Been Unable, However, to Establish His Address.

MYSTERY VEILS MISHAP ON ROAD TO ALEXANDRIA

Victim of Injuries Has Been in Irrational Condition Since Accident.

The unidentified man who was found by R. C. Dawson, E. H. Fairburn and his wife, of 503 Second scious condition on the Washington-street southeast, lying in an uncon-Richmond highway about a mile from the Highway Bridge early yesterday morning, and who was rushed to Emergency Hospital by James W. Young, of 128 F street southeast, and Mr. Fairburn, was thought to have been identified yesterday afternoon as Henry Gentry, address unknown.

Victim Is Irrational.

At the hospital it was found that he had a broken left leg, a possible fractured skull and possible internal injuries. He is apparently about 40 years old.

The man has been in an irrational condition since admittance to the hospital. When brought to the hospital he carried a membership card from the Maryland Athletic Club, which is on the Bladensburg road, in Maryland, bearing the signature of Frank L. Rogers, as secretary of the club. Efforts to get in touch with Rogers had been unsuccessful at a late hour last night.

Police stated yesterday that the man had either been knocked down by an auto as he was walking along the highway or had been thrown from a car. The second theory, however, was not given much credence by those investigating the case.

Man Was Well Dressed.

The man was well dressed, it was said, and there was a question in the minds of Arlington County authorities as to whether a man of his appearance would have been walking along the road at such an early morning hour.

Another name found in the pockets of the injured man was H. P. Smith, of 722 Seventeenth street northwest.

At the hospital last night authorities stated that the man's condition was somewhat improved.

AUTO WRECKS KILL TWO FROM CAPITAL

Washington today. No funeral arrangements have been made.

Mr. Parish, who was prominent in Tulsa, Oklahoma, married Ann Kennedy, golf star, last Thursday. He was killed when his automobile went into a ditch while passing a bus at St. Elmo, Ill., according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Mr. Parish had returned to Tulsa in June after completing an expedition to Haiti and other Carribbean Islands for the Smithsonian expedition. After his marriage to Miss Kennedy last Thursday, the couple left for this city, where Mr. Parish was to plan another expedition to be undertaken early next year.

The expedition from which he returned last spring was known as the Parish Smithsonian Expedition to Haiti.

The Associated Press dispatch from St. Elmo said that his neck was broken. Mrs. Parish was also seriously injured. The bus driver said that the Parish car tried to pass the bus, ran over the shoulder of the road and went into a ditch. A brother of Parish is en route to St. Elmo, from Tulsa, by airplane.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Parish, parents of the dead man, are said to be in Baltimore.

Soldiers' Home Employe Injured.

Leland O. Wright, 5 years old, an employe of the Soldiers' Home, was injured seriously last night when struck by an automobile driven by Raymond Laizear, of Silver Spring, Md.

Mr. Wright was walking west on Rock Creek Church road near North Capitol street, when Leizear's automobile, which was going west, knocked him down. He was taken to Walter Reed Hospital, where his injuries were diagnosed by Dr. L. E. Judge as a compound fracture of the skull. He was later removed to Emergency Hospital.

Running out from the curb in front of his home at 1011 Fourth street southeast, 5-year-old Paul Rollins suffered a cut lip and abrasions of the right leg yesterday afternoon when he was struck and knocked down by an automobile driven by William Gray, 21 years old, of Virginia avenue near Ninth street southeast. The child was admitted to Casualty Hospital.

Boy's Scalp Is Cut.

Everett J. Wolfe, 10 years old, of 1319 Queen street northeast, suffered lacerations about the scalp yesterday afternoon when the automobile in which he was riding collided with another machine at Twenty-ninth and R streets northwest. He was treated at Georgetown Hospital.

The car was driven by his father, Smoot W. Wolfe, 41 years old. The other machine was driven by Mrs. Helen Clark, 42 years old, of P street near Eighteenth street northwest.

Manuel Periell, colored, 21 years old, of 2026 Flagler street northwest, was treated yesterday at Emergency Hospital for injuries received when a car in which he was riding collided with another at Sixteenth and B streets northwest.

Periell was riding with Carlton S. Thomas, colored, 1 years old, of 326 T street northwest. The car struck another driven by George B. Cornelius, 34 years old, of 1333 Park road northwest.

Man Is Thrown From Truck.

Maj. Henderson, 50 years old, colored, of Sixth street near R street northwest, was slightly injured yesterday when thrown from a truck when it collided with an automobile at Fourth street and New York avenue northwest. He was taken to Freedman's Hospital, where he was treated for slight injuries.

His truck collided with a machine driven by Miss Myrtle E. Phillips, 1151 Fourth street northeast.

Denton Spier, 23 years old, of 7019 Georgia avenue northwest, is in Emergency Hospital suffering from injuries received yesterday when his automobile overturned near Fordham, Va.

He was taken from the wreckage by a motorist who brought him to the hospital. He has a fractured hip and possible internal injuries.

Narrowly Escapes Drowning.

A collision just north of Four-Mile Run early last night between an automobile driven by Irwin H. Echols, of the Park Central Apartment, 1900 F street northwest, and one driven by Raymond Lucas, Negro, and occupied by George Dion and Harvey Fortune, Negroes, resulted in a narrow escape from drowning by Dixon when his machine plunged through the guard fence and overturned in the Four-Mile Run pond. Although this is commonly known as the "hot water pond," Dion found the water anything but hot, and when finally rescued was taken to the Alexandria Hospital, where he was treated by Dr. M. D. Delany for cuts and bruises, and shock from his immersion. Dixon was the only one injured.

Dixon's companions jumped from the car and ran, and the police are looking for Lucas, who lives on South Pitt street, but had not returned home to his home at a late hour last night. The case was turned over to the Arlington County police, as the accident occurred just over the corporation line of Alexandria.

The accident caused considerable excitement among passing motorists, and the road was jammed with automobiles for a time.

EDWARD F. LOOKER, RELIGIOUS WORKER, IS DEAD OF ILLNESS

Well-Known Capital Man Served as Washington Cathedral Bursar.

HELD MANY OFFICES IN CITY ORGANIZATIONS

Bishop Freeman Pays Him Tribute as One Who Had Unusual Charm.

Edward Farragut Looker, 65 years old, bursar of Washington Cathedral for many years and a widely known resident of this city, died after a brief illness yesterday in Garfield Hospital.

Born in Cincinnati, Ohio, on October 8, 1864, the son of the late Rear Admiral Thomas H. Looker, U. S. Navy, he moved to Washington as a youth and made his home here continuously until his death, being identified with various well-known activities.

Mr. Looker had been particularly prominent in Episcopal parish and diocesan work here as a member of the vestry and as registrar of St. John's Episcopal Church in Georgetown. During his affiliation with the Riggs National Bank he became associated with the Washington Cathedral about 20 years ago, and had served as bursar for a long period.

Held Many Offices.

He was a vice president of the Sons of the American Revolution here, treasurer of the Aztec Club, for many years secretary of the Churchman's League, a member of the Loyal Legion, a member of the board of governors of the Washington Golf and Country Club, and secretary of the Edes Home in Georgetown.

He made his home at 1312 Thirtieth street northwest. His family is well known in Washington, one of his nephews, Earl Looker, being author of "The White House Gang."

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal bishop of Washington, paid high tribute to Mr. Looker.

Showed Love for Church.

"Mr. Looker was a man of unusual personal charm, a Christian gentleman of that school which I hope will never pass from our church and community life," declared Bishop Freeman in part. "His love for the church was demonstrated in his service to St. John's parish, to various diocesan agencies and to the cathedral, into which he builded the best years of his life. I shall always associate with him those high standards of Christian stewardship which he applied constantly to his custodianship of funds given to the glory of God and for the upbuilding of the Cathedral."

PRISONER IS QUIZZED ON APARTMEN FIRES

non street northwest, where a colored janitor had found cellar walls ablaze and a two-gallon can of gasoline in the place. The walls had been soaked with gasoline.

Patrolman B. F. Howze and C. C. Williams, of the Eighth Precinct, went to the Balfour fire, which forced out the tenants in night clothes and was a repetition of the scenes of the Denver Apartment in which Miss Cammack lost her life.

Patrolmen Howze and C. C. Williams recognized the colored man near the Balfour. When they learned that a colored man had been seen in the corridors of the apartment, they recognized the description given them as that which fitted Williams.

He was arrested and Detective J. E. Kenney and Patrolmen Howze and Williams questioned him at length, but he denied having started the blazes. Capt. A. P. Knapp, who lives on the first floor of the apartment, identified Williams as the colored man he had seen in the building, police said.

Investigation of the fire showed that it had started among a pile of furniture crates in the basement of the apartment. The beginning of the fire at the Denver Apartment was also traced to the cellar. Before the fire was discovered there a colored man was seen leaving the building.

Authorities are trying to trace the purchase of the gasoline found by John E. Oakey, 45 years lod, the colored janitor of the apartment at 1840 Vernon street northwest.

Evangelist of Texas Is Revival Preacher

"Stocks and Bonds" Subject Chosen by Rev. Joe Jeffers at Temple Baptist Church Service; Tent Will Be Erected Wednesday.

"Stocks and Bonds" was the topic of a sermon preached by the Rev. Joe Jeffers, Texas evangelist, at 8 o'clock last night at the Temple Baptist Church, Tenth and N streets northwest. A tent will be raised by Wednesday night, it was said, for the revival services. The Rev. T. E. Boorde, pastor, introduced the minister, whose sermon follows in part:

"Are stocks and bonds going higher or will they continue to decline? What does it matter anyway? The one big question is still the age-old question of the Phillipiaan jailer, who was in bonds of sin, who cried: 'What must I do to be saved?'

"Paul and Silas had been put in stocks. It was midnight in the dark jail. Their backs were bleeding from stripes placed there by dissatisfied politicians. These flaming evangelists had by their fearless preaching broken up dens of vice and crime. Immediately they assailed the preachers, ordered them to appear before an investigating committee and give account of all their actions. The devil hasn't changed his tactics very much. If he can condemn, accuse, undermine or destroy a courageous preacher's influence, he knows he has won a real battle. These crooked politicians beat them and cast them into prison, placing them in stocks. They prayed and sang prises unto God. Suddenly the earth began to quake. The jailer was aroused and thinking the prisoners had escaped started to kill himself.

"But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thyself no harm; we are all here."

Then the jailer, who was in the bonds of sin, cried and said, "What must I do to be saved?" Paul did not tell him to arise and be very quiet and not get excited or show his emotions.

Those who are afraid of excitement, emotionalism and sensationalism in religion, should study this sixteenth chapter of Acts. Paul wasn't afraid of a little excitement anyway.

What must I do to be saved? Not learn some rituals, creed or catechism. They do not save. Not join some church or be christened, confirmed or be baptized. No, not according to Paul's answer. There are too many people now who are depending on church membership, baptism or churchianity to save them rather than "the blood of Jesus, which cleanses us from all sin." Paul did not say:

Quit your cussing, drinking, gambling, smoking, and dancing and try to do better. That would be reformation. Paul knew the jailer needed regeneration that would change his heart toward sin, God and the world. Oh, how we do need to come back to Jesus' wonderful and unchanging message to a moral, religious, reformed unregenerated sinner and hear Him say, "Nicodemus, except a man be born again, he can not see the kingdom of God." (John iii:3.)

If your automobile is in the garage and the engine is missing, it isn't going to do any good to paint it or take it out of the garage and put it in the parlor. What it needs is fixing up on the inside. That's what America needs most today.

Culture, refinement, education or social ethics will not save us from doom. Greece, Rome and the nations of the past trusted in their wealth, culture, art, wisdom, charity and they fell. Let our own dear country beware! We are facing the greatest crisis in our history. It is our heart that needs to get right with God. Everything else will immediately adjust itself. God says so: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things will be added unto you."

What must I do to be saved? Paul answered, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

Then from love for what Christ has done for you follow him in baptism; give your life to Him in consecrated service. Jesus said: "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments."

"Just as I am without one plea,
But that Thy blood was shed for me,
And that Thou bidst me come to Thee,
Oh Lamb of God I come, I come."

GEORGE CHENOWETH SERVICES ARE HELD

Pioneer Railroad Builder, Former Capital Man, Dies at Yorktown.

MADE MONTANA SURVEY

Funeral services for George Durbin Chenoweth, 80 years old, widely known civil engineer, were held yesterday afternoon at his home in Yorktown, Va. Mr. Chenoweth, whose family has lived in Washington for half a century, died Friday of pneumonia.

A graduate of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., Mr. Chenoweth had been associated in an executive engineering capacity with a number of railroads during the early construction days. He directed the survey for the first road in the Territory of Montana and laid the foundation for the Northern Pacific Railway at a time when his men had to be guarded from the Indians by the Army.

During the World War he was assigned by President Wilson to build a railroad from Yorktown to the Army balloon station. He has made his home there since that time. At one time he was civil engineer in the Quartermaster's Corps of the War Department and aided in the beautifying of several national cemeteries, among them Arlington. He had also been associated with the Pennsylvania and the Utah, Idaho & Montana Railway.

He leaves a widow and two sisters, Mrs. Mary D. C. Turner and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Sloan, both of Washington. Two nieces, the Misses Elizabeth and Anna Sloan, also survive.

Unemployment Biggest Question.

"The outstanding economic fact of the past year is serious unemployment," the council said. "Business depression replaced a period of prosperity. Under our present business economy there have been frequent breakdowns due to fialure to adjust production to markets and the inability of our credit system to meet such emergency.

"The responsibility for such breakdown rests squarely on business management. Despite the progress that has been made in fact finding in the past decade, management has not adequate information and does not know how to use such information as is available in order to prevent business depressions. The field of distribution is quite unorganized and only the first steps have been taken to accumulate information for the development of better management in this field."

"Industries and countries are inter-"The past year has brought falling prices throughout the world and increasing unemployment everywhere. Commerce and markets are roganized on a world-wide basis. Consequences of misjudgment are transmitted throughout the whole structure and every community. The responsibility resting on management is correspondingly grave."

Possibilities of remedying the world complaint were said to lie in better understanding and better economic information, in building up reserve in industry to maintain workers, employment on a yearly basis, shortening of hours and work-week lengths, encouragement of vacations, old age pensions, more employment agency organization under State control, stabilization of industry's programs of production and distribution, control of the tendencies of bettered machine design to displace workers. All of these were attached by the report to the proposition that "society has a definite responsibility for providing service for those who need employment."

CHANGE IN WEATHER HELPS RETAIL TRADE

Check in Increase of Steel Mill Output Proves to Be Unfavorable.

SIGNS OF RECOVERY FEW

New York, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Industry entered the fourth quarter of a trying year rather hesitantly during the past week.

Liquidation in both the grain and security markets was rather nerve-wracking, but as the week progressed, equanimity returned, and the speculative markets seemed to regain their balance.

Further autumn expansion was reported in mercantile activity, with the much desired cool weather proving a mild impetus to retail trade.

One of the least favorable developments of the week was the checking of the gradual acceleration of steel mill production, which had been in evidence since early August. Iron Age estimated output at 61 per cent of capacity, or unchanged from the previous week.

Auto Output Slump Holds.

The slump in automobile manufacturing remained a conspicuous depressant to the steel trade, but the feeling persisted that the slackest period of the year had been passed in July, with the possible exception of the year-end shut-down period due at holiday time.

On the whole, the week's developments were disappointing to those looking for a vigorous business revival this fall. It has been notable, however, that the majority of the statistical services, and most of the reviews issued by leading banks, have not indicated anything more than a fair seasonal upturn at this time as probable.

Failure of the commodity markets to achieve the stability which seemed to be in the making some weeks ago was a cause of some concern But improvement in the grain markets, after wheat had touched the lowest price in 23 years, promoted a better feeling as the week wore on. Cotton was under pressure as well, touching the lowest price since 1915. Copper metal was cut to 10 cents a pound, the lowest since 1896, but the low prices stimulated decidedly better buying.

Freight Car Loadings Drop.

Freight car loadings, as reported for the week ended September 20, were disappointing, showing a reduction from the previous week, contrary to the normal seasonal trend, and the largest percentage drop from the like weeks of 1929 and 1928 thus far reported.

Despite these displeasing developments, many corporations were said to be developing fairly ambitious programs for 1931. President Hoover, addressing the convention of the American Bankers Association, recalled the rapid recovery from the 1920-21 depression, which in many respects was more severe than the current one.

The National City Bank, in its monthly economic survey, pointed out that most of the recognized composite indices of business activity touched during July and August what were approximately the bottom levels of 1921, "warranting the assumption that the decline must have nearly, if not entirely, run its course."

The bank survey disclaimed any desire to minimize the situation, saying we do not agree with those who contend that the present depression is largely psychological, and that liberal doses of sunshine talk are all that is needed to restore us to the road to prosperity."

SCENES OF HORROR AT CRASH DESCRIBED

First Eyewitness to Reach R-101 Saw Struggling Figures in Flames.

HEARD TWO EXPLOSIONS

A graphic description of the destruction of the R-101 as it crashed to earth at Beauvais was written for the New York World News Service by George Darling, an Englishman, residing in Beauvais, who was standing on the street talking with a friend when he saw the lights of the dirigible approaching from the North. His dispatch follows:

By GEORGE DARLING.

Beauvais, Oct. 5 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—At first glance it seemed strange to me that the airship should be bucking and rolling so. It also seemed to be very low down to pass safely over the watershed to the south of the town, so my friend and I moved to a point where we could watch its progress. Suddenly I saw it take a dive. The next instant there was an explosion and the huge craft burst into flame.

I rushed to get my car, and being familiar with the country roads in the vicinity, was able to make my way toward the blazing wreck. I was hardly out of Beauvais when I heard a second explosion. I was able to drive within half a mile of the airship and from there could see clearly across a field by the light of the conflagration.

Rescue Work Hopeless.

I first noticed three men, then a couple more, silhouetted against the burning dirigible. When I arrived on the scene these three men—Binks, Bell and a third man whose name I don't know—and myself tried to see what could be done to get through the envelope to save the many bodies pinned under the fore portion of the envelope which sagged down right on them, leaving the only possible channel of escape through the after portion of the airship.

But by this time the whole envelope was filled with flames, and as we tried to work our way through the empty machinery cabin we realized the task of rescue was hopeless.

I saw only one sign of life—a pair of airms raised through the flames as if some one were struggling to get through but was borne down by the heat. All those who escaped were aft. I was accompanied to the scene of the disaster by M. Blonpuis. The flaming ures frantically striving to escape.

St. Just des Marais, near Beauvais, France, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Belief that the British dirigible R-101 had motor trouble before she crashed to earth was expressed to the Associated Press correspondent today by Emile Barroux, a member of the St. Just city council, who was an eyewitness to the tragedy.

Barroux, who owns a large farm here, said:

"The British airship passed over my farm at exactly five minutes past 2 o'clock this morning. The roar of its motors had awakened me. Looking out of the window I got a distinct impression that the motors of the airship were functioning very badly and that the ship was in difficulty. I therefore was not totally astonished when later I heard a terrific explosion.

Saw Flames Leap Up.

"I saw flames leap to heaven before I heard the explosion. Of course, the time necessitated for transmission of sound may explain this, and perhaps the flames broke forth simultaneously with the explosion. However, I and others who saw the spectacle got the impression that the airship was burning before it struck the ground.

"I accompanied the gendarmes immediately to the scene, rushing across fields, and found the airship had crashed to earth in the center of a half-cultivated field and almost a mile from the nearest habitation. The nose of the dirigible was stuck into a growth of short trees on the slope of a small hill. The rest of the airship extended over a declivity in the ground. The position of the rudder seemed to show she was trying to land when the accident occurred."

DRUNKENNESS HEADS PARK POLICE CASES

Misdemeanor Mounts Steadily, Capt. Montgomery Says in Report.

12 DRIVERS SUMMONED

Drunkenness headed the list of causes for arrests made by the United States Park Police in Washington, according to a statement made yesterday by Capt. Ray C. Montgomery, superintendent of the Park Police. There were 86 arrests made for alleged drunkenness with violations of minor traffic regulations coming second with 55 cases.

There were 19 causes of arrest listed in the Park Police record for September; which was also made public yesterday. Speeding in the parks was the cause of 12 drivers' summons to court, 23 were arrested for disorderly conduct, 12 for fast driving, and 7 for reckless driving.

In making the September record public yesterday Capt. Montgomery pointed out that intoxication arrests were steadily mounting, each month showing a small increase over the preceding one. Ten-cent store extracts, the police head said, seemed to be the principal intoxicant used.

Making something of an unusual record, only 6 of the 278 arrests made during the month have not been disposed of in court, according to Capt. Montgomery.

Police Hunt Girl Who Fled Institution in Father's Car

Washington police have been asked to look for Lucile Derby, 18 years old, who escaped from the Ivacoda School at Clifton Station, Fairfax County, Va., yesterday afternoon.

According to Fairfax authorities, the girl was allowed outside the school grounds because her father, from Charlottesville, Va., was visiting her. The school, which is a home for wayward girls, granted the permission for her to leave for a short time with the father, and when they had driven away from the grounds for a short distance and stopped, the girl jumped into her father's car and drove rapidly away in the direction of Washington.

The Fairfax County sheriff and other officers have been trying to trace the car, but last night they had been unable to find anything which would reveal the girl's destination. However, it was thought that she would head either for Richmond or Washington.
